

THE COLLEGE OF OTTAWA.

Continued from first page. speak of a subject which they had not made a specialty, but all would concur in the excellence of the commercial course in the College of Ottawa, where young men were formed not merely as accountants but were educated to fulfill all the duties of life, either in their private business or the various public capacities that might be conferred upon them by their fellow-citizens.

After the distribution of prizes, Mr. P. Ryan, the winner of the Papal medal, and Mr. D. Hurteau delivered valedictory addresses. Both were excellent pieces of composition, happily conceived and excellently delivered. The sentiments and events referred to in them evoked a strong sympathetic chord in the hearts of all students present and their many good points were greeted with hearty applause. The close of the entertainment found all parties in the best of spirits, and soon after the breaking up the students could be seen in scattered groups exchanging addresses and making all possible arrangements to preserve, during the coming vacation, the friendships which had been born in the opening of the session and which had ripened into maturity during the progress of their studies.

In conversation after the exercises, His Excellency said that he was highly pleased with the proceedings from the opening of the day previous to the close that evening, and predicted a grand future for the College. The Ottawa Citizen of Friday, June 13th, describes the parting of the boys as follows: Yesterday morning two special trains of the Canadian Pacific Railway, one bound east and the other south, left the Union Depot at the flats at 5 o'clock. The eastward bound train consisted of a locomotive, tender, baggage car and four first-class coaches, which were occupied by about 150 students.

Previous to the departure of the boys the scene about the station was a most animated one. There was a grand gathering of the students, both old and new and which included not only the departing scholars and Alumni, but those who remain in Ottawa during the vacation. "Boys will be boys," and with the students of Ottawa College, as with those of Cambridge, Oxford and Yale, even among the grey-headed graduates, an irresistible spirit exists to revive the school boy frolics of their student days. It is, therefore, not to be wondered at that while waiting for the hour of departure last college choruses, in which the voices of under-graduates, graduates and staid holders of degrees mingled together. The boys, old and young; for, like Oliver Wendell Holmes, boys will be boys even to the age of sixty, indulged in the college torture of "bouncing," and one unfortunate was tossed more than once high into the air to be caught on his descent by the outstretched arms of his comrades. It must be gratifying to the city, to the college in which these young men have received or are receiving their education which fits them for the battle of life to know that they leave Ottawa with regret, that the older ones who have been merely on a visit here, have been glad to renew their acquaintance with the old college halls, and that those who have not completed their collegiate course look forward with pleasure to the renewal of their studies under the amiable and able direction of their reverend and skilled instructors. The fact that the College of Ottawa has been able to enlist in its classes such a large number of young "American cousins" should be gratifying to Canadians generally, and to Ottawa and the College in particular.

These young men gathered from every part of the Union carry back with them kindly recollections of Canada and its institutions. Many of the older students have entered on professional and political careers with pleasure to themselves, and occupy positions in which their voices will be heard by numbers of citizens of the Republic. So long as they retain pleasant memories of their schoolboy days in Canada, there is no doubt that their words will go far to foster the kindly feeling which should exist between the two young nations of the North American continent.

LETTER FROM ARCHBISHOP LYNCH. TO THE REV. GENERAL AND MINISTERS OF THE MODERATE ASSEMBLY OF THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

Ont. Donor, Rev. M. Whelan, P. P. St. Patrick's, Ottawa. COMMERCIAL COURSE. Fourth Grade—Bernard T. McKinnon, Melrose, P. E. I. Donor, Mr. P. A. Egleson, Ottawa.

Silver Medal for excellency in Zoology, awarded to Richard Sims, Ottawa, Ont. Donor, William L. Scott, B. A. After the distribution of prizes, Mr. P. Ryan, the winner of the Papal medal, and Mr. D. Paul and adorn their highways with statues and busts of their heroes in war, literature, and statecraft, though the moral of many of them were by no means edifying. Nor do we call a mother an idolater when she kisses the photograph of her dear son in a foreign land. The kiss is relative; it applies to the entire. So with Catholics when they venerate the image of Christ and His saints. We do not find when you call the mayor of a city "his Worship," or in societies "his Most Worshipful the Grand Master," or "His Most Gracious Majesty the Queen." Catholics pay to God alone sovereign worship, and only give to the Blessed Virgin, the Apostles, and other saints that veneration and honor which is due to them as friends of God and benefactors of their race in the spiritual sense.

allegic affection of the heart. Although having suffered many trials of the world, her life was so pure and even that there was not a gray hair on her head, and no one would suppose her to be fifty years of age. She leaves three sons and two daughters; one of the latter being the wife of Mr. Thomas D. Egan, of the New York Catholic Agency. As the never forgot to pray for the dead, prayers are invoked for the repose of her soul.—N. Y. Freeman's Journal, June 14, 1884.

A painful shock was created amongst her many friends by the sad and unexpected intelligence of the death of Mrs. James Ryan, of North Crosby, which occurred on the 23rd May, ultimo. The deceased lady, who had not been long or, it was hoped, seriously ill, had the great and consoling privilege of having the last Sacraments administered to her by her parish priest, the Rev. Father Stanton, of Westport, and she died in the perfect possession of her mental faculties. Her death was as her life—peaceful and edifying. She was the third daughter of Jeremiah Donoghue, Esq., one of the best and most respected residents of Bedford. The funeral was held on the following Sunday, was the largest ever seen in that section of the country, and showed how widely the feeling of respect and sympathy had spread for the relatives of the deceased. She leaves a young family of seven children and a devoted husband to mourn the early death of a good mother and an exemplary wife. Requiescat in pace. Amen.

It is with regret we record the death of Thomas O'Callaghan, who died in the township of Osgoode on the morning of June 14th. The deceased was born in the County of Armagh, Ireland, in 1816, and came to Canada in 1830, and shortly after settled in the then small town of Cornwall. He entered commercial life in the latter place, and was very successful, when he retired from business in 1860. He took an active part in the rebellion of 1837-8, being attached to the cavalry force during the terrible cholera and fever epidemics which scourged Cornwall in that year. When the wealthy died from the affliction, Mr. O'Callaghan was ever found ministering to the wants of the sufferers. In 1866 he removed to the Township of Osgoode, a church in the country of any pretensions to his death. He was ailing for some time, and had ample time to reflect on the road that kings and commoners go. He addressed himself assiduously to his religious duties, and before his death he received the last rites of the Church, of which he was a devoted member. His funeral, which took place on Saturday, the 7th, to Metcalfe, was attended by persons of all denominations, who came to pay the tribute of respect to the venerable dead. High Mass was sung by the Rev. Father Duane. The church and altar were draped in mourning. The hearse was drawn by a team of four horses, and the remains were placed in their resting-place. May his soul rest in peace.

TO THE CLERGY. MR. J. M. DENTON, of London, has for many years enjoyed, and still enjoys, an enviable reputation for turning out ordered clothing for the Clergy. A large experience gives him an advantage in this regard enjoyed by few other merchant tailors. He always makes his purchases personally in the English market, selecting for the purpose above named, the choicest and most suitable textures manufactured. This season his stock of West of England and French Broad-Cloth is unusually large, and comprises not only those goods suitable for clergymen, but also those generally on business as advantageous terms for the general public, as any house in the Dominion.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER Absolutely Pure. The time has long gone by when balls and public buildings had to be inefficiently lighted with a few scattered gas burners or oil lamps and the powerful reflectors that now throw their light upon audiences that are gathered in our large buildings tell us of the progress of the age and the inventive genius of Mr. I. P. Frink, by whom they are so ingeniously made. The forms of this reflector are so similar that it is not necessary to describe them, as there is hardly a hall or church in the country of any pretensions where they may not be found, and we presume it is safe to say there is not one where they have not answered perfectly all that is claimed for them. The heat of the lamps or gas burners up the foul air, which passes through an opening in the reflector, thus keeping the atmosphere free from noxious odors and substances; whilst the reflection obtained from it is superior to any other form of lamp or burner in use. It is stated by those who use that the economy of the arrangement is remarkable. Mr. Frink is also the inventor of the daylight reflectors which are needed to throw light into dark corners and countenances without the use of gas or other artificial light which in cities where economy of space is an object, are so frequent. In such this invention is found to be invaluable.
