Place Long Since Dismantled and Used as Observation Post.

Paris, June 8.—The fate of Fort Vaux upon which the efforts of the Germans have been centred for three days, remains in suspense according to the latest reports received by the French war office. Its loss would be regretted by France on account of By Special Wire to the Courier. regretted by France on account of the moral effect and for the sake of the garrison who struggled so gal-lantly amidst its shell swept ruins, but military critics assert that its possession would be of little benenit to the enemy.

The fort has long since been dismantled and is regarded by the French command as merely of value as an observation post. It is asserted that its occupation will not help the Germans to take Verdun any more step forward.

Behind Fort Vaux the enemy 's confronted by an exceptionally strong inner line to the defense of which both nature and military art have given their greatest aid. This line includes the positions of Froide Terre and the heights of Souville and Tavannes which are crowned with forts. Vaux forms an advance work which supplements the defense of Souville fort and was constructed with a view of sweeping the ravine which it com-
