HIS MAJESTY'S SON MAY ATTEND FUNERAL

Duke of York may Represent Our Empire at McKinley's Obsequies. Royal Yacht Ophir Arrives at Quebec.

Fame Point, Sept. 14.—The royal yacht Ophir and H. M. S. Diadem and Niobe and the cruisers Indefatigable and Tribune, passed inward at noon.

Father Point, Sept. 14, 10 a. m.—H. M. S. Quail is now anchored off Cape Rosier. The weather is very smoky all along the coast, caused by forest fires.

Quebec, Sept. 14.—The royal yacht Ophir passed Cape Chatte, 233 miles below Quebec at 6 p. m.

Montreal, Sept. 14.—The royal yacht Ophir and H. M. S. Diadem, Niobe, Indefatigable and Tribune passed Fame Point at 3.22 p. m. H. M. S. Quail at 12.40 p. m.

Quebec, Sept. 14.—The city is crowded with strangers, but the weather is far from being promising or propitious. It has been raining all the afternoon, and the inspection of the militia by Major-General O'Grady Halley, in the presence of His Excellency Lord Minto, was interrupted by rain and had to be abandoned.

According to the latest news, the Ophir was at Father Point at 4.30 o'clock this morning, and was detained there on account of the fog. Sir Wilfrid and a party went down the river at noon, but were unsuccessful in meeting her. She could not be found in the thick fog. If the fog clears, she is expected to arrive in the morning.

If the weather clears favorably there will be a gay time. The city is ablaze with hunting and electricity for to-morrow and Tuesday nights. A most elaborate address of welcome has been prepared in Quebec to be presented in the name of the citizens, to their Royal Highness in the chamber of the Legislative Council, at 11.30 to-morrow. The address is in the form of an album, about 15 x 12 inches—an elaborate work, bound in the finest scarlet morocco and embellished with the arms of His Royal Highness the Duke of Cornwall and York.

THE DUKE MAY ATTEND THE FUNERAL

London, Sept. 14.—It is learned by the Associated Press that King Edward is considering the advisability of the Duke of Cornwall and York attending the funeral of President McKinley. The foreign office heartily indorses the suggestion, subject to the approval of the United States cabinet, and the consent of King Edward, who, under the circumstances, is obviously the most concerned. It is said that if it is decided to be advisable for the Duke of York to attend the funeral, the Canadians will doubtless gladly put up with the disturbance of their program consequent upon such a momentous diversion of the royal tour. As regards this suggestion and other official details connected with Great Britain's efforts to honor the dead President, great uncertainty prevails, owing to the Marquis of Lansdowne, the foreign secretary, being at a sequestered spot in Ireland, King Edward being in Denmark and the cabinet being scattered over the United Kingdom.

The Sunday Special presenting the question of the attendance of the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York at the funeral of President McKinley, says: "In view of the deep concern the King has manifested from the moment the President was shot, there can be doubt that the attendance of the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York would be received with warm gratitude by the United States; and, despite questions of etiquette, the King may well feel that such an opportunity of strengthening the good relations of the two great English speaking peoples should not lightly be put aside."

'T'WAS SOLEMN SABBATH IN CITY SANCTUARIES

Maple City Mourned with those who Mourn.—Fitting Tributes Paid the late President of the United States.—Pastors Draw Lessons from his Life.

Lord Minto, Governor-General of Canada, has caused the following message to be sent to the mayors of all cities and towns in the Dominion: "In consequence of the lamented death of President McKinley, it is desired by His Excellency that the flags on all public buildings shall be placed at half-mast as a mark of respect. You will please give this information general publicity."

"R. W. SCOTT, Secretary of State."

Mayor Sulman, of this city, had anticipated the wishes of His Excellency, as he had ordered the flag on Chatham's city hall placed at half-mast early Saturday morning.

Other flags throughout the city with that of the American consulate were also flying at half-mast.

Yesterday was a solemn Sunday in Maple City churches. In every sanctuary appropriate reference was made to the terrible tragedy which has befallen the neighboring republic. The music, too, was of a fitting character to the occasion.

ST. ANDREW'S.

In St. Andrew's Church yesterday morning Rev. Dr. Battisby referred to the death of President McKinley. He said that momentary relief was obtained a few days ago, by encouraging telegrams, but that was of short duration. Sadly and suddenly the end came, and the nation, as well as the civilized world, was plunged in sorrow.

Nowhere is that sorrow more genuine than in the British Empire. Had the Czar of Russia or the Emperor of Germany been the victim one could understand it. But President McKinley was a man of peace, a Christian gentleman, living in a free country where the tyranny of the East is unknown, and all classes are protected. Even from a political standpoint he had few enemies. No president had done as much to foster kindly relations with Great Britain, nor has there been one so highly thought of there. Had one of the ex-presidents, still living, been in power for the past three years, there might have been trouble with Great Britain by officious meddling. But President McKinley has drawn both nations closer together, and had he lived, happier results would likely have followed.

We sorrow to-day as Canadians, we sorrow as British subjects, and mingle our sympathy with the stricken nation. May the mantle of Elijah fall on Elisha, and may he prove himself to the chariot and horsemen of Israel.

And let us not forget his helpmeet and companion in life. The nation will live to forget its sorrow, but not so the widow. Her grief is her own, while she has the sympathy of the world. Her husband knows more now than he did one week ago, of the great mystery of godliness. He is now free from the anxieties of state and the troubles of life, and where no anarchist shall ever enter.

VICTORIA AVENUE METHODIST.

Rev. J. T. George delivered an excellent sermon last evening on the death of President McKinley. He said: "It is a rare thing within a year to mourn twice the deaths of chief executives of two nations so closely connected as Great Britain and the United States. Not long ago we mourned the loss of our most beloved Queen, but now we mourn the loss, not of one of the British nation, but the President of the Republic to the south of us. So to-night we mingle our expressions of sympathy with the tears and sorrow of our cousins across the way. For the third time they have lost their President by the hand of the assassin. It used to be said: 'Uneasy lies the head that wears the crown.' But now you might say: 'Uneasy lies the head of the chief executive of the Republic.' At the present time the American nation is at peace. They seem to know how to fight a political battle and afterwards bury the hatchet and have no ill-will towards each other and you will find that among those who mourn the late President's loss most are those holding the highest positions in the opposing party. The late President lived a pure life at home and in society. We have yet to learn of one single instance in which his integrity is compromised and also one act in his life that has marred his character. His home life has been very beautiful. His wife, when he was elected, thought that the social attractions would prove too much for him and turn his head, but we find his wife spending her evenings at home knitting comforts for the hospital children while he sat beside her studying up the duties pertaining to his position. This shows that the chief pleasure of the husband should be in the companionship of the wife and not in the social function of the world. He was essentially a strong man. He performed in his life such tasks that a weaker could never have accomplished. His various acts show him to be a leader of men. It seems that the disrespect for law and order in the States has become great."

er. Look how they have burned the negro at the stake right in front of the Government and the Government cared nothing about it. God save us when the chief executive of a country fails to defend the life of the vilest criminal and bring him to a proper trial. The man who does not hold the administration of justice in respect is a dangerous man to society. It is a hard thing to say, but there seems to be very little value placed on human life here. The law as a protecting and sheltering arm of society is trampled in the dust by both high and low.

In Acts 18th chapter and 17th verse you will find the following words: "And Gallio cared for none of those things." As a Roman magistrate, he viewed with indifference the abuse in his presence of an innocent citizen, and if I were to give a reason for the assassination of the late President it would be the disrespect of law and justice by all classes of the Republic. I care not who we may be, the man who does not hold law and justice in respect is a dangerous element to society. When I compare and study the civil administration of this nation with others I find two things standing out prominently, (1) disregard of the value of life and (2) disrespect for law as the prohibitive and sheltering arm of organized society. The high and the low claim the right to criticize with equal freedom the actions of the Supreme Court and the acts of legislative bodies. Justice has suffered much, but nowhere more than by those whose duties it has been to enforce it. No foe so deadly as he who disregards the sacredness of right and privilege. God save us when our administrators will ask it is safe to bring a criminal to proper trial and impartially administer justice. It is then no longer a question of right but one of policy. Woe to those who sow to the wind for they will reap the whirlwind. I hope in the name of all that is good that he who now assumes the sceptre will signalize his administration by an impartial administration of justice to the criminal and to the criminal mob.

God help us and help those to the south of us to learn to maintain the institution of civil government.

The choir sang as an offertory "Sleep thy last Sleep" by Baraby.

Miss Baxter sang a solo entitled "One Sweetly Solemn Thought," by Aubron. Miss Brucklin rendered as an instrumental solo, "Nearer My God to Thee." The church was nicely straped for the occasion.

WILLIAM ST. BAPTIST.

At William St. Baptist Church yesterday, special prayer was offered up for Mrs. McKinley, wife of the late President, for the American people, and for the new leader of the people, Mr. Ross, while in conversation with The Planet, said that he thought the papers were so full of the late President that he had become great.
