OLD PASTOR WAS WELCOMED

Magnificent Musical Services Characterized the Park St. Anniversary.

Large Congregations Attended Despite the Inclement Weather.

Large and appreciative audiences attended the anniversary services at the Park St. Methodist Church yesterday. In the evening the church was packed to the doors and those who attended were fortunate in hearing one of the finest services ever held in the Maple City. Rev. R. J. Treleven, of Toronto, occupied the pulpit on both occasions and preached two excellent sermons. Mr. Treleven was a former pastor of the church and he was warmly welcomed by his old Maple City friends.

The musical part of the services was prepared and conducted by Miss Ethel Webster, the talented and popular leader of the choir, and she deserves great credit for providing the music lovers of the city with a program of music the equal of which has not been given in Chatham for some time.

In the morning the choir sang "Unfold, Ye Portals" with extra accompaniments played by Earl Sheldrick, flute; Harry Philip, clarinet, and Guy Philip, cornet. Mr. Lowe, tenor, a comparatively new arrival in the Maple City, sang "Faithful Love, Open Your Windows Towards Jerusalem."

At the request of the pastor, Miss Webster curtailed the musical part of the service in the evening so that she was not able to give the complete program as advertised. This unfortunate circumstance caused considerable disappointment to many in the congregation, but the program as rendered was well above the standard and passed off in exceedingly good style.

The services opened with a Hallelujah Chorus by the choir. This is a new chorus, especially prepared for this occasion and it was exceptionally well given. At this service also Miss Webster sang "The Last Chord," with a flute obligato by Earl Sheldrick. This solo was very pleasingly rendered and was the subject of much comment after the service. During the offertory the choir again sang the "Inflammatus, from Rossini's Stabat Mater, with the soprano obligato ably taken by Miss Webster.

Her excellent contribution ever given by the choir and it was deeply appreciated by the artistic element of the congregation, as a change from the ordinary choir music. Miss Webster is indeed to be highly complimented upon the manner in which she sang the obligato which runs through the whole selection, giving it a finished and pleasing touch. The Lord's prayer was chanted at both services.

Miss Pratt, the accomplished organist, was at her post as usual and should also come in for her share of the praise for contributing to the success of the service.

Yesterday was the anniversary of the church and the services were of a very special character throughout the day. In the morning Mr. Treleven preached a very impressive sermon and in his opening remarks of gladness at being again in Park St. church he said, "Yesterday evening about a half an hour before I left for London, I was asked by a gentleman if I would go to the Central prison that night and preach to the prisoners. I said I was sorry, but could not as I left in a half hour for London. 'Oh, well,' said he, 'it's the same thing.' I told him he would not think so if he spent as happy a three years in Chatham, as I did."

After the morning service a large number of the members of the church met and shook hands with their former and beloved pastor.

In the afternoon Mr. Treleven addressed the Sunday school scholars and bible classes in the Sunday school hall.

In the morning, taking his text from the 29th verse of the 8th chapter of the Epistle of Paul to the Romans, repeating his text, "Confess unto the image of His Son," Mr. Treleven said that was the great work and purpose of the church to the young men, to make them in every respect the image of Christ. "It is the privilege of every person to conform to the image of His Son. We talk of our bodies being vile," he continued, "what makes them so? When we get them from God at birth are they vile? No! It is sin that makes them so. When a man becomes a Christian and is born again do you ever stop to think that the body is as much redeemed as the soul? The body is the temple of the Holy Ghost. To be born again is the transformation of Christian life and character, it is of divine grace, it uplifts the beggar from the gutter and maketh him to inherit eternal life and happiness. Except ye be born again ye cannot see the Kingdom of God, and I say with all respect, it were better that you were not born the first time if ye are not born again. The artist takes an unshapely marble stone and develops a thing of beauty. Some one has said that the stone submits to the action, it is not so however because if the stone could submit, it could also resist, and it cannot do the latter. The marble does nothing; the artist does the whole thing.

We are not to God as the marble is to the artist. We must help or hinder God's work. We must be co-workers with Him. A good illustration of co-work with Christ is that of Dr. Abbott talking to the acorn, which says—I will grow, become a great tree with birds nesting on my branches; I will make shelter and shade; I will make glad some the fire-side; I will be a rib in a great ocean steamer; with sturdy the tossings of the rough seas and will land passengers on the other side of the ocean. 'Will you do all this,' asks the Abbott of the acorn.

'Yes, God and I,' replies the acorn. It takes God and the acorn to make the great tree. It takes God and the husbandman to make the harvest. It takes God and the child to make the man to make the Christian.

All great works are done by the co-operation of God and man. God cannot make you the image of His Son without your co-operation which means a certain amount of self-denial. A boy who has made up his mind to be a great statesman, cannot indulge in all the play and pastimes his companions do, but must sacrifice the low for the high to achieve his aim. You can be a co-worker with God by prayer. 'As He prayed He was transfigured before them,' What is prayer but the outgoing of the heart after God, but prayer must be from the heart, and from the lips, to be sincere, cheerful and the harvest corresponds with the seeds.

In conclusion Mr. Treleven asked the congregation if they were cherishing the ideal to be conformed to the image of His Son. It should be the uttermost ambition of their lives, and if they failed in that life indeed was a failure, as by the grace of God it could be attained.

In the evening Mr. Treleven took his text from Psalm 18, and part of the 19th verse, his text reading, 'He brought me forth also into a larger place.' Beginning, he said: "It is the mind's desire for growth, enlargement, expansion. Even if an eagle is born in a cage, it will beat its wings against the side of the cage and want freer air, purer atmosphere and more space. There is no one who is content to live all one's life and die in one place. There is no student satisfied with his present sphere of knowledge. What Christian who has tasted of the sacred grace is satisfied with the present and is not searching for greater areas of knowledge? What drive the Puritans from the shores of England? They wanted more room to think, to believe, to worship unhampered by rulers. I was talking to an old saint of 84 years the other day and I asked him how he was. He was so healthy and well preserved. He replied that it pays a man to take good care of himself. Christianity condemns those things which tend to shorten life."

Continuing, the reverend gentleman gave the life of the great Matthew Simpson and the power. He also spoke of the life and conversion of George Selous and his work.

Continuing, he spoke of the influence of Christianity in inventions; he asked if an invention of any account was ever made outside of Christianity. The best music, the best art, the sciences, etc., are all due to the work of Christian nations. A man makes his own circumstances. Some say if you take a poor man, put him in a good house, he will be better, but they begin at the wrong place. The first place to start to make a man better is at himself. As an illustration of this he gave the life of David Brewster, of Detroit.

The enlarged moral judgment in man is a great help. Illustrating this he gave the story of a German who had made his fortune in grain and one night his elevators were burned with a quarter of a million's worth of grain in them. Speculators came along next day and offered him $15,000 for the grain, as a good part of it was not much damaged. He accepted the offer and was about to sign the contract, when he overheard them say what a lot of whiskey they would make out of it. He told them he would not sell his grain for that purpose, and replied, 'I am a poor man to-day compared with yesterday, but my principles were not corrupted with the grain,' and he tore up the contract.

In closing he said he had good news for the people, which will mean eternal happiness to all who accept it. Will you accept the good news?

LAURIER HAS NO TARIFF POLICY

Tarte Has, and Has the Courage to Avow it—Hence They Couldn't Agree.

Hon. Mr. Borden Deals With the Quarrel in the Grit Party in a Speech at Montreal.

Montreal, Oct. 26.—Mr. R. L. Borden, the Conservative leader, was entertained to a complimentary luncheon on Saturday by the members of the Junior Conservative Club, on the occasion of his return from his tour in the west. The affair was attended by a large number of Conservatives, and was very enjoyable.

Mr. Borden received a very cordial reception, and in reply to the toast of his health, made a long speech, in which he told of his trip to the Northwest, which, he said, had been a great success. He also advocated a policy of protection for Canadian industries, and said the outlook for the Conservative party was bright. Mr. Borden also took occasion to refer briefly to the Tarte incident. Mr. Borden said he would not like to say much about the incident, as it was in the nature of a family quarrel. He had read the letter addressed to Mr. Tarte by Sir Wilfrid Laurier. He expressed pleasure that the Premier's health had much improved. He had opposed Sir Wilfrid in the house, but had never met with anything but courtesy from that gentleman, and wished him all good things. He drew attention to the fact that in Sir Wilfrid's letter there was no definition of the Liberal policy on the tariff. He had charged, the Liberal party with their want of policy ever since 1896, and he was glad to find the letter referred to corroborated his charges. It would seem that the criticism of Mr. Tarte is not the minister of public works had avowed the policy of the government, but that while the government had no policy at all, Mr. Tarte had the courage to avow his own policy. The speaker, realizing the importance of the banquet, at which Sir Wilfrid had spoken without saying anything definite on the tariff, and Mr. Tarte had also avoided the question, but Mr. Tarte had made the strongest protection speech that could be made. He doubted whether a word the ex-minister had said during the last two months was stronger than the lastian nations.

Speeches were made by Mr. F. D. Monk, M. P., and others.
