had quite a sharp brush with their trotters. Segee's little mare carried a wagon of 400 weight and Hagerman's horse either a sulky or skeleton wagon. The start was made at the foot of the road, and the race was kept up for some distance. Both claimed the race, but Mr. Segee says he is willing to allow anyone who saw it to give a decision. He believes that with a month's training his mare can distance Hagerman's trotter, and is prepared to make a race with Mr. H. for $50 or $100.
