voted confidence in the government. This record is almost without a parallel in the history of provincial governments. and shows that a master builder laid the plans, and that a skilful hand was at the helm. Indeed, it may be truly said, that party in the recent elections is due in a large measure to the provincial reputation of Mr. Blair as a leader, and to the large personal influence and following which he has in every county of the province. It is only fitting and right therefore, that as long as he can be prevailed upon to do then we say detect the wrong doers and so, he should continue to command the ship which bears his name, and which he has piloted through so many stormy seas in safety. The fact that he received an ungrateful and unexpected blow at the hands of his old county will make little difference to anyone except the people of York. The province is Mr. Blair's constituency, and the province is larger than York county. The individuals whose personal spite and hatred led them to adopt unfair and disgraceful means to defeat Mr. Blair in York, are welcome to a full enjoyment of whatever satisfaction they can derive from their barren victory, purchased at the price of decency and honor. In the meantime, Mr. Blair will go out into

We would advise them not to come to any hasty conclusion, but to take the full four years to figure the matter out. There are various reasons why it is best to think over the situation deliberately. In the first place a hasty conclusion is very often a wrong one. When people jump blindly at conclusions without stopping to think, they often make fools of themselves, and if the decision happens to be one which cannot be reconsidered, it sometimes brings disaster and remorse in its train. Of course we have not in mind any recent hasty action of the people of York, but are speaking merely on general principles. Look before you leap or you may get

In the next place we think the people of York should keep the full four years in mind, because during the first year or two they may be disappointed in the men for whom they traded off the leader of the government and his colleagues. The men they got in the trade are new men without a record, and while their performances may be somewhat unsatisfactory at first, they may develop into something phenomenal before the end of the four years. Mr. Pitts, for instance, with one foot on the the temperance horse, and the other on the Protestant horse, and the other on the Protestant horse, and both hands on the opposition mule, might become a famous circus rider. Mr. Pinder might originate some plan for spending the bye road money which would entirely do away with the road machines, against which he has a road machines, against which he has a some elector had tampered with the hal-strong antipathy. Capt. Howe might beroad machines, against which he has a come famous as the author of the Atkinson telegram, the Leary telegram having become a chestnut, and Mr. Allen might get his brother-in-law, Charlie Beckwith, appointed clerk of the house of assembly If any one of these things were to happen at any time within the next four years, the people of York should not be discouraged or disappointed at their bargain, for they would be getting all they were promised or had any reason to expect. Of course if none of these things did happen it would be another question, but then as the St. John Globe says "They would have Pitts" anyway, and we think it may now be fairly said of the people of York that they don't want the

Again the people of York should take ample time to think over the matter, because each succeeding year will probably bring forth additional food for thought. It may take all of the first year to realize that Messrs. Blair, Wilson, Anderson and Colter are no longer their representatives. When a bridge falls down or gets out of repair, when a hill wants cutting down, when the roads become impassable, or when money is wanted on a bye-road, the people may come right to these gentlemen in the future as they have done in the spring. past. Of course they will never anticipate the possibility of a failure to get what they think they want. When did York ever ask for anything and not get it? Of course all they will have to do will be to see the attorney," or Wilson or Tom, or write to Anderson. But the attorney will have to tell them, with feelings of deep emotion, that he is not authorized to speak for them any more, he dosn't represent York now, he has moved away; William and Tom, and Uncle John will be only private citizens. "Gentlemen," will be the reply, "you will have to get what they want. When did York ever ask for anything and not get it? Of course all they want was undoubtedly a case of suicide.

As for scenic delights the Northern Pacific Railroad passes through a country unindications are that it will be under construction as soon as spring opens. John Campbell has lately visited the farmers in Kingsclear and in all cases has secured the right of way at a very small cost, in many cases nothing being asked. Mr. Thorne has visited this route recently, especially that portion between Long's creek and Springhill, and was much pleased with the country and its capabilities. But these, while good things to think about, are poor material to travel on, and the people may get sick of their bargain and say to their representatives "Why don't you get something for York; other counties are getting all they ask for?" and then will their representatives smile sarcastically and say, "Gentlemen are you not satisfied with your trade, you've got rid of Blair and have got us, what more do you want? THE FACTS ABOUT IT.

Most untruthful statements and vile calumnies have been going the rounds of the opposition press regarding the ousting of Dr. Atkinson in Carleton county. The following from the Carleton Sentinel shows the exact state of the case: It is strange that a paper like the St. John Sun should lower itself to the plane of notoriously uncleanly sheets in discussing the proceedings here at declaration and, with the means of correct information available, make covert and direct atacks upon our venerable sheriff. We grant that as a general rule the candidate who gets the largest number of votes should be allowed to take and hold the seat, for even when the evidence of fraud, on one side, is strong there remains the suspicion that the other side may have resorted to similar methods. If wrong doing by both parties can be discovered, then we say detect the wrong doers and

We are not prepared to state or argue law points; where a wrong is done through a misconstruction or misunderstanding of legal technicalities there is a higher court where these technicalities can be properly construed and the wrong righted.

But we do protest against the shameful riticism upon the sheriff's decision, and that have been made.

It has been made to appear first that the decision of the sheriff was based on the fact that the number of ballots taken from fact that the number of ballots taken from a certain box was greater than the names of voters as placed on the check list by the clerk. This statement is entirely wrong. Then it is said that the sheriff before he decided not to count the alleged return from Simonds, because there was no legal return, had already accepted precisely similar returns from other polling places. This is a wrong statement.

There was informality in some other returns, but no fatal defects according to the sheriff's interpretation of, and instruction as to, the law. The affidavits necessary to be taken by the chairman and clerk at each polling place, on opening the poll each polling place, on opening the poll had been taken and subscribed by the officials at every polling place but Simonds. In some of the other returns, at the bottom of the check list at the close of the polls only the chairman had signed; in ome only the clerk had signed and only in this regard consisted the informality; no required oath had been overlooked.

In the case of Simonds, however, the document sent to the sheriff as a return was defective at both ends so to speak. The affidavits had not been taken or subscribed by either officer and neither had signed at the close of the polling and the

The charge made by newspapers that the officials appointed to hold the polls were creatures of the sheriff is an absurd charge; although it really has nothing to do with the case, the fact is, we believe, but the chairman at Simonds, was politically as the chairman at Simonds. could not conscientiously, complete the

How give them this chance?

Up in the Northwest is a great empire waiting for young, and sturdy fellows to come and develop it and "grow up with the country." All over this broad land are the young fellows, the boys that Lincoln referred to, seeking to better their condition and get on in life.
