A high wind was blowing, and it materially added to the fury of the flames, while hindering the firemen in their efforts to save property. Sheets of flame and hot smoke were frequently hurled dangerously close to the struggling firemen, who met with little or no success against the fiery element.

The large wholesale furniture manufactory of Revillon Freers, extending from E7 to 14 Queen Victoria street, was said to be doomed shortly after fire gained headway. Following this news was the information that a large paper warehouse, a number of fancy goods stores and the Gulcher Electric Light and Power Company's building were also a complete prey to of fancy goods stores and the relectric Light and Power Combuilding were also a complete prey to mea. The buildings rom the corner of Bennet's Hill to No. 135 onen Victoria street are either blazing leredy or else are gutted, smouldering reduins with soorched, blackened shells around hem. All this rain has been done and much more is being done, to all appearances unchecked, in spite of the presence of twenty stam fire engines. Two fire escapes and a large number of old "Manual" fire engines re upon the seene. The latter, however, might just as well be in the British museum as operating on such a conflagration.

The members of the corps were elegantly dressed in scarlet jackets, white trousers and black-top boots, with cuirasses, helmets and swords of glittering steel, with the exception of the commander, Mr. Cameron Brown, who was distinguished by a gilt head armor. The maneuvers were of the most intricate nature, and as the various movements, so puzzling to the eyo in following, were perfected with neatness and colerity, rounds of applause broke from the delighted spectators. A genuine ovation was tendered to Captain Brown and his company for the splendid issue of that which could only be attained by patient practice and cool confidence. Those in the corps were: Messus Spittal, J. Wanless, Simson, Morkin, Meyeu, Mc-Kinley, Kirkpatrick, Trebilcock, Mellwain, McLeod, Rivard, A. Johnson, Wrights, Sippi, R. Tatham and Rychard.
