LONDON, THURSDAY, JUNE 2.

A Man Who Has Made Good.

As a citizen of London, as an employer of labor, as London's representative in the House of Commons, C. S. Hyman has always "made good."

In Parliament, C. S. Hyman has won a standing in keeping with the importance of the city of London, which honored him with its confidence. As chairman of the Railway Committee he has displayed ability of the first order. As chairman of the special Redistribution Committee in 1902 he was equally proficient, and acquitted himself in that highly difficult task, according to the testimony of both friends and opponents in a way worthy of all praise.

London is honored in C. S. Hyman's selection as Minister of Public Works for Canada. A few Toronto, Hamilton and Ottawa politicians ask London to reject the honor, and to reject C. S. Hyman, who has always proved faithful to London, and why? For the alleged reason that the Government is wronging the Northwest. But the weight of evidence from the Northwest goes to prove that the people mainly concerned are remarkable well pleased with the Autonomy Bills.

Will London reject its own honor, and a man of proved ability and faithfulness, such as C. S. Hyman, on account of a make-believe separate school issue, at the behest of George Elias Foster, Richard Bailey Bennett, and William Gray? Where were these men when the principle of public control of public schools was really attacked in 1897? Trying to coerce western people, then as now. They were trying to coerce Manitoba into accepting clerical-ly-controlled schools then. They are now trying to coerce the Northwest into an agitation which the Northwest people themselves repudiate.

When the principle of provincial rights is in danger, London and C. S. Hyman will be on guard, and London will look with little hope in such an hour to Geo. E. Foster, R. B. Bennett or Wm. Gray.

London is for Canada, London, and C. H. Hyman.

Appealing to Prejudice.

It was hoped by sober-minded Liberals and Conservatives that this contest would not be embittered by appeals to sectarian or religious or class prejudices.

In 1896 the Liberal party fought a winning battle for provincial rights, but it can be said without fear of contradiction that nothing was uttered in that historic campaign by responsible Liberal public men or newspapers which could offend the adherents of any creed or race. The issue was clearly defined: the Federal Government endeavored to force legislation upon the Province of Manitoba, which the Legislature of Manitoba, supported by the great majority of the people of the Province, would not accept. The Liberal party advocated a policy of conciliation and compromise, and a Liberal Government at Ottawa afterwards accepted the terms which Manitoba offered the Conservative Government, but which the latter refused.

At the present time the Federal Government is enacting laws against which the Legislature of the Northwest Territories, and the great majority of the people make no protest. These federal laws are in effect precisely what the Territorial Legislature has asked for. The leader of the Opposition claims that this federal legislation is an invasion of Provincial Rights, but he offers an amendment which constitutional lawyers say is identical with the Government's proposals. The only difference is that the Government is straightforward, and Mr. Borden skulks behind a technical jargon which may be interpreted one way in Ontario and another way in Quebec.

But Mr. Borden has raised the cry of Provincial Rights, and says it is not a religious question, or a question of separate schools. Upon the latter point he was very emphatic when he came to this city a few days ago to give the keynote of the campaign. But the Toronto clique, which is responsible for this election, is determined to make the issue one of race and religion. The speeches of Dr. Sproule, M. P., and W. F. Cockshutt, M. P., at Mr. Gray's nomination, were brazen appeals to prejudice. Dr. Sproule gave the lie to his leader by raising the issue of national schools. Mr. Cockshutt represented the Federal Government as the enemy of religious freedom. At a later meeting Messrs. Bennett and Foster harped on the same string, the former a supporter of Premier Haultain, who asked for the legislation which the Federal Government is granting; the latter the right-hand man of Sir Charles Tupper in the attempt to coerce Manitoba.

Mr. Gray's organ, the Free Press, has also dropped the mask. It is industriously fanning the flame of discord. In yesterday's edition it attributes these remarks to one whom it calls "Father Crowley, of the Archdiocese of Chicago."

"The church school is a flourishing institution in the States; it has been increasing in strength for some years, but its dimensions are not nearly so great as those to which it has reached in this country. Still, they are large enough to be a danger to the state. But we are fighting the separate school system. We are resolved not to allow it to gain ground in the States. The public generally are becoming aroused, and you need not be surprised if you see a great stir across the line on the school question."

The man styling himself Father Crowley is not a priest of the Roman Catholic Church. The object of publishing such a paragraph is to stir up the dregs of prejudice and bigotry, and endeavor to create a religious war in the community.

Provincial Rights.

What are provincial rights? In 1867 when the original four provinces were federated certain subjects were set apart as being under the exclusive legislative jurisdiction of the provinces and certain others were reserved to the Federal Parliament only. In most of these cases the reasons for assigning the subject specially to the jurisdiction to which it is assigned is clear, e. g., as when matters of customs duties, naturalization and aliens, sea coast fisheries, beacons, buoys and light houses, currency and coinage, postal service, militia defense and trade and commerce are assigned exclusively to the Federal Parliament, because they have more or less to do with our relations to foreign countries. In other cases, such as census and statistics, inland fisheries, marriage and divorce, bills of exchange and promissory notes, interest, savings banks, weight and measures, the criminal law, etc., there seems no special reason for assigning these matters to the federal authority other than that it makes the same laws apply to a wider jurisdiction and gives us greater uniformity. Lawyers tell us that it would be a great convenience if the laws of property were the same and administered by the same authority throughout the country, and that many other laws would be more useful in the wider sphere. But the negotiations leading to confederation were a series of compromises. The provinces were naturally jealous of their powers and were reluctant to give up any of them. There were two distinct races in the country, each cherishing its own institutions, usages, and privileges. The new entity called the Dominion was not yet in existence and called forth no enthusiasm, no loyalty, and no special care from any party, and some things which might safely have been given to federal jurisdiction were left with the provinces to satisfy them and to procure their assent to confederation. The American union had the same difficulty, and the jealousy of the various states for their "sovereign powers," as they called them, not only at first, but for more than half a century, caused many bitter contentions. This state jealousy and the necessity for compromise has produced not a little inconvenience, for there the a little compromise has exceeded that of the provinces with us. This inconvenience the American public have met and put up with in that spirit of compromise and recognition of the rights of each man to have some regard paid to his views and his conscience which is necessary to the welfare of every community. The social compact called the state or the community depends on concession and compromise, each member yielding something of what he considers his natural right in deference to the opinions of others, and in this country, no less than in the United States, and in education, no less than in some other matters, have contradictory consciences to admit honesty in each other and to yield some points for general peace and good.

In Canada, once the founders of the Dominion had yielded to each other so far as to enable them to unite, there has been little friction between the two authorities. In the cases of the Rivers and Streams Bill and of the Liquor License Act the Conservative Government at Ottawa sought to invade the provincial field, but were foiled by the sturdy defense of the Liberals under Oliver Mowat. These cases are within the memory of most Liberals, and few of them, remembering the conduct of the Conservatives in these cases and in that of the Manitoba schools will place much confidence in the pretensions of the Conservatives of today, the very persons who have all along been the determined enemies of Provincial Rights. When these assaults were made upon the rights of the provinces where were R. L. Borden and William Gray and almost every other man of these new champions of liberty? Fighting in the fiercest ranks of the coercionists, Conservatives never have and never honestly will stand for real autonomy. The whole history of that party is a record of class privilege, class arrogance and class oppression. Against their assaults on liberty the Liberal party, weak and few at first, but ever bold in the defense of freedom, has always nobly stood and still so stands, and no thoughtful Liberal will be deceived at this date by the pretended conversion of these life-long encroachers. When Messrs. Borden and Gray shall have the manhood to stand up to the public and confess their wrong of 1896 and to declare their penitence, then, and not till then, may a Liberal listen to their new claims. We don't pretend to be theologians, but we understand that repentance goes before conversion.

Cosmic Insanity.

We are far from attributing to certain Toronto daily newspapers, which are denouncing the Laurier Government, any real responsibility for their apparently sinister conduct. The insane may even commit murder, which after all is a less crime than to stir up civil and religious strife, and go unpunished. True, they are in such cases, restrained by due process of law from repeating the offense, but unfortunately no process of law has yet been enacted for the restraint of newspapers while criminally insane. A farmer who sows Canada a thistle seed in the highway may be punished. The editor or orator who sows falsehood and dissension and hate—well, in this case, we plead on his behalf that he is not responsible. Toronto is not only a hotbed of Toryism; it is also a hotbed of what is closely allied to it, religious bigotry. It is in the air there, like gold mining fever or oil fever, a cosmic insanity, from which a large part of the community suffers, the editors like the rest. If it could be quarantined and localized, it might do little harm, and the editors will recover after awhile, but in the meantime, it scatters broadcast a certain degree of infection. Happily, in the purer air of outside towns, like London, and with the good antiseptic, common sense of our people, infection is not usual, though some persons here have suffered slight attacks. A great study is cosmic insanity—especially of the Toronto type.

And still no word from Mr. Beck!

A vote for Gray is a vote for King Edward—London Free Press. God Save the King!

That great constitutional exegete, Billy Gray, still refuses to say what Mr. Borden's school policy means.

The people of the Territories want their present school system, and are getting what they want.

The Free Press will be sorry to hear that the Seventh Battalion will not be reduced. It is deprived of another knock at Mr. Hyman.

Mr. Bennett, of Calgary, asked a London audience if he would travel 3,000 miles if the west didn't care about the autonomy bills. As Mr. Bennett is a railway solicitor and travels on a pass his self-sacrifice is not so very touching.

Many people imagine that Mr. Borden's amendment if it became law would give the new Provincial Legislatures power to abolish the present school system. Mr. Borden's amendment would do no such thing. Mr. Borden himself makes no such claim.

A Lover's Letter.

[Clinton Scollard.]
O long are the leagues of division
Twixt me and the dream of my heart!
And fate, as in wintry desolation,
Persistently holds us apart.
I could breathe my dearest far better
Inspired by her presence I know;
Alas, I must tell her by letter!
How—how should it go?

Shall I call her "my friend"? That sounds chilly.
No ice (except ice) for me!
Shall I greet her as "sweet"? That seems silly.
Though she's as sweet as can be,
Still I mention a goddess—say Venus,
Or one of her mythical crew?
Well, somehow I fancy (between us)
That hardly would do!

Shall I delve into botany's pages
And quote from the language of flowers?
Shall I cull from the lore of the sages
"Bright gems of expression" for hours?
Love-letters from a bard, perhaps Swinburne,
In delicate hand shall I frame,
To indicate how I within burn
With passionate flame?

Shall I study the stars in their courses?
Shall I brood on the moon from the glen?
Shall I ponder the ethical forces,
For aches that are aching to pen?
Dear heart, naught about nor above you
Is fair as you whom I adore!
So I'll just write "I love you! I love you!"
Be mine!" and no more.

Hamlin's Client.

[Boston Herald.]
Hamlin Hamlin for many years a United States senator from Maine, and vice-president during the civil war, was wont to tell the following story on himself.

"An Englishman by the name of Pearson, while passing along the main street in Bangor, stepped to a hole in the sidewalk and, falling broke his leg. He brought suit against the city for $1,000 and engaged Hamlin as counsel.

"Hamlin won his case, but the city appealed to the supreme court. Here, also, the decision was for Hamlin's client.

"After settling up the claim, Hamlin sent for his client and handed him $1,000. 'What's this?' asked the Englishman.

"That's your damages, after taking out my fee, the cost of appeal, and several other expenses," said Hamlin. "The Englishman looked at the dollar, and then at Hamlin. 'What's the matter with this,' he said, 'is it bad?'"
