GOES CURSING TO HIS DEATH

The Murderer of Father Leo Fights on Way to Gallows

ACTS AS A SNARLING BEAST He Resists the Prison Guards, Who Hold Him Fast Until He Exhausts Himself.

Canon City, Col., July 15.-Giuseppe Alia, who shot Father Leo Heinrichs at the altar of St. Elizabeth's Church in Denver on Feb. 23 last, was hanged in the penitentiary here today. He went to the gallows a fighting, biting, snarling bundle of humanity.

The night noises peculiar to every penal institution had died away when Warden Chas. H. Merderson, apparently a series of deranged from the cell and through an interpreter told him the hour of his death had arrived.

Alia stood for just a moment glaring at the warden and the attendants. Then he raised his head, uttering a series of Italian oaths and offered physical resistance against accompanying the guards to the gallows. He was held by the warden's assistants until he exhausted himself by his efforts.

Calling death-maledictions on the Roman Catholic priest hood and shouting in Italian, "Long live Italy!" he was then carried to the death trap, which was sprung at 8:30 o'clock.

Alia's crime, the murder of Father Leo Heinrichs, of the order of Franciscan monks, at the altar rail in St. Elizabeth's Church in Denver while the priest was administering the Sacrament of the Eucharist, struck horror to the heart of every person in Denver and awakened anger throughout the Catholic world, lest it should prove the beginning of a general plan of priest-murder.

Alia had been in Denver several weeks, unemployed, and apparently penniless. Early on the morning of Sunday, Feb. 23, according to his story, he was aroused from sleep by the ringing of the chimes in St. Elizabeth's Church. He dressed himself hurriedly and walked to the church. He went, not with the thought of thanksgiving, for he declared, and many times repeated after his arrest, that the chimes recalled wrongs experienced in his native Italy, and attributed by him to the church.

He Intended Murder. Entering the church, Alia blessed himself with holy water and seated himself where his view of the altar would be unobstructed. There he followed the ritual up to the point where communion is given to all who are prepared. Alia approached the altar and, kneeling, awaited the arrival of the priest officiating, not knowing, Alia said, or caring who it should be.

A number of other communicants had assumed the same position at the altar, and kneeling, awaited the arrival of the priest officiating, not knowing, Alia said, or caring who it should be.

Alia, according to his own statement, could barely restrain a desire to spring at the throat of the priest.

Along the line passed the priest, placing upon the tongue of each communicant the consecrated wafer, and repeating the lines of the mass, declaring the eucharist thus administered is the Savior Himself in line. Father Leo, placing the wafer upon the tongue of the stranger, began: "Take, eat; this is my body."

But he stopped, horror-stricken. The subject of the prayer had spat the blessed morsel from his mouth.

The Fatal Shot. Almost simultaneously with this degradation, a shot rang out, and Father Leo sank to the floor, mortally wounded. A bullet from a revolver fired by Alia had penetrated the priest's body near the heart.

Wulstan Workman, hearing the shot, rushed from the adjoining sacristy just in time to administer to Father Leo the last sacrament. Father Leo expired moments later in the arms of his brother priest.

Immediately after firing the shot, Alia, with a curse, started toward the main aisle of the church and rushed for the door. With hair disheveled and smoking revolver flourished over his head, he made his way to within ten feet of the portal, where he tripped and fell.

Policeman Daniel Cronin, who was among the worshippers, wrenched the revolver from Alia's hand and dragged him to the street in an effort to protect him from the maddened worshippers. Outside, the policeman and his charge were surrounded by several hundred angry and excited men.

Alia from the officer's hands without several priests and Franciscan Brothers appeared on the steps and pleaded with the enraged people to leave the avenging of the murder to God.

The presence of the ecclesiastics, interceding for the life of the destroyer of a beloved brother, had effect. The single policeman was permitted to take Alia away in a buggy, hastily driven to police headquarters.
