CHAPTER XII.

The Approach of a Man Named Smith. Mr. Redmond Wrandall, gray and gaunt and somewhat wistful, rode slowly through the leafy lane, attended some little distance behind by Griggs the groom, who slumped in the saddle and thought only of the sylvan dell to curse It with poetic license. Ever since Mr. Wrandall had been thrown by his horse Wrandall had been thrown by his horse in the park a few years before, his wife had insisted on having a groom handy in case he lost his seat again, hence Griggs. It sometimes got on Mr. Wrandall's nerves, having Griggs loping along like that, but there didn't seem to be any way out of it, nor was there the remotest like-lihood that the groom himself might one Griggs, therefore, was a physical insult, anyway you looked at him; his very presence in the road behind was a blatant, house-top sort of proclamation that he, Redmond Wrandall, was in his dotage, and that was something Mr. Wrandall would never have admitted if he had had anything to say about it.

Today he was riding over to Southlook to looked upon as a process of the southlook to the looked upon as a process of the southlook to the looked upon as a process of the southlook to the looked upon as a process of the southlook to the looked upon as a process of the southlook to the looked upon as a process of the southlook to the looked upon as a process of the looked upon

They were letting no grass grow under their feet, notwithstanding a udden and unexplained period of procras tination on the part of Leslie, who had gone off for a fortnight's fishing in Maine. Moreover, so far as they knew, he had departed without proposing to Miss Castleton, an oversight which deprived his mother of at least two weeks of activity along obvious lines. Naturally, it was quite impossible to discuss the future vith Miss Castleton under the circumstances, and it was equally out of the question to discuss it with security in the very constricted circle that Mrs. the very constricted circle that Mrs. Wrandall affected in the country. It really was too bad of Leslie! He should

NERVOUS TROUBLES ON THE INCREASE

They Are Due to an Impoverished Condition of the Nervous exhaustion - or neurasthenia, as medical men call it-is one of the greatest evils of the present day, for it is destroying the life and energy of thousands of men and women, or worse, driving them to insanity. The causes of this trouble include overwork, mental strain, worry, indiscretions, and sometimes it follows The signs of this trouble are usually great weakness after any exertion, nervous headaches, trembling hands, shakiness in the legs, irritability of temper, weak digestive power, insomnia. The life of the sufferer becomes full of miseries.

The true treatment for this trouble must consist of a building-up process, for the above signs mean that the exhausted nerves are calling for more nourishment from the blood supply. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make new, rich blood that feeds the starved complaining nerves, and in this way they have cured thousands of times neurasthenia, neuralgia and other nervous disorders, and have restored strength and nerve-energy to despairing people. Mrs. Isaac Wilson, Calabogie, Ont., gives thanks for having been restored to health through the use of this medicine. She says: "When I began using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills was a nervous wreck; I couldn't do my work, could not sleep at night, suffered from nervous headaches, and the least noise would completely upset Only those who have suffered from nervous trouble can tell what I endured. I doctored for a time, but did not get any benefit. Then I learned of Dr Williams' Pink Pills and sent for a half-dozen boxes. By the time I had used these I was almost well, and a couple more boxes completely restored my health, and I have had no return of the trouble. I can cheerfully recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to those who suffered from any form of nervous If you are weak, nervous or out of health begin to cure yourself today with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. You can get them from any medicine dealmail at 50 cents a box or for $2.50 from The Dr. Wiliams' Medicine Company, Brockville

"I understood Mrs. Wrandall to say he was not expected before Saturday."
"Yes, sir. He came unexpteced, sir."
"Well," said Mr. Wrandall, with an indulgent smile, "we will not ride them down."

"No, indeed sir," consented Griggs, with a wink that Mr. Wrandall did not he said humorously. "They are safe."

"I believe you, sir," said Griggs, also himself so far as to steal a look over his right shoulder.

It was Mr. Wrandall's design to ride on to Southlook and surprise Leslie and his inamorata at the lodge gates, where he would wait for them. Arriving he dismounted and turned his steed over to Griggs, with instructions to ride on. He was join Mr. Leslie and Miss Castleton and walk with them for the remainder of the distance.

He sat down on the rustic bench and lighted a cigar. The lodge-keeper saluted him from the garden below. Later the keeper's small son came up and from the opposite side of the roadway regarded him with the wide, curious gaze of a four-year-old. Mr. Wrandall disliked children. He made no friendly overtures. The child tood his ground, which was in a sense disconverting, although he couldn't tell why. He felt like saying "Shoo!" Prespubly the brown a supply the like saying "Shoo!" ently the keeper's collie came up and sniffed his puttees, all the while looking askance. Mr. Wrandall said: "Away with you!" and the dog retreated with grown displays to the story where he had some dignity to the steps, where he laid down and fixed his eyes on the stranger. Half an hour passed. Mr. Wrandall frowned as he looked at his watch. Another quarter of an hour went by. He changed his position, and the dog lifted his head, without wagging his tall, "'Pon my soul!" said Mr. Wrandall in Fifteen Years.

Just then the dog and the child deflected their common stare. He was at first grateful, then interested. The child was beaming, the dog's tail was thumping a merry tattoo on the wooden step. steps crunched on the gravel and he turned to look, although it was not the direc-tion from which he expected his son and

He came to his feet, plainly perplexed.

Miss Castleton approached, but the fellow beside her was not Leslie.

"How are you, Mr. Wrandall?" called out the young man cheerily, crossing the

"Certainly," he announced, taking his place beside her. To himself he was saying: "This young blade has been annoying her, confound him." "Miss Castleton had a note from Leslie this morning, saying he wouldn't start home till Friday." said Booth, puzzled. "You don't mind my saying so, Miss

"Not at all. I am sure he said Friday."
"I fancy he did say Friday," said Mr.

drinking. "Griggs?" inquired the two in unison.
He volunteered no more than that. He was too busily engaged in wondering what son could be thinking of, to leave this his son could be thinking of, to leave this delightful girl to the tender mercies of a handsome, fascinating chap like Brandon Booth. He didn't relish the look of things. She was agitated, suspiciously so, and Booth wasn't what one would describe as perfectly at ease. There was something in the air, concluded Leslie's father

"I hear you are coming over to spend a fortnight with us, Miss Castleton," said he pleasantly.

Hetty started. "I beg your pardon, Mr.

Wrandall," she said, although he had spoken very distinctly.

"Leslie mentioned it a—oh, some time"

"Leslie mentioned it a—oh, some time ago, my dear. This is the first time I have seen you, otherwise I should have added my warmest appeal for you to come early and stay late. Ha, ha! Hope you will find your way to our place, Brandon. You are always a most welcome visitor." The girl walked on in silence, her lips shut with curious firmness. Booth looked at her and indulged in a queer little smile, to which she responded with a painful flush.

"Glad to have you see it, sir."

"Glad to have you see it, sir.
"Thanks."

He slackened his pace, an uneasy frown appearing between his eyes.
"I am almost afraid to tell Sara the news we have had from town this morning. He is so opposed to notoriety and all that sort of thing. Poor girl, she's had enough to drive one mad, I fear, with all that wretched business of a year

d side before he quite realized what had happened.

"Griggs," said his master, staring at the pedestrians, "when did my son return?"
Griggs grasped the situation at a glance—a rather vague and imperfect glance, however. "This morning, sir," he replied promptly, although he was as much at sea as his master.

"I understood Mrs. Wrendall."

Hetty stopped in her tracks. She went wery white.

"What news, Mr. Wrandall?"

"They say they have stumbled upon a clue—an absolutely indisputable clue. Smith had me on the wire this morning. He is the chief operative, you understand, Miss Castleton. He informs me that his original theory is quite fully substantiated by this recent discovery. If you remember, he gave it as his original theory is quite fully substantiated by this recent discovery. ## ST. JOHN AND HALIFAX

[Special to The Advertiser.] Ottawa, Feb. 24.-Can the Governmen run suburban trains or carry out its pledges? Those were the questions which the opposition asked the Government today. Mr. A. K. MacLean asked for the restoration of suburban trains to Halifax. To the surprise of both sides the next suppliant for suburban favors was Mr. Cochrane's colleague, the Hon. J. D. Hazen, who asked that some suburban trains should be restored to St. John. Parliament was further astonished when pledges? Those were the questions which liament was further astonished when Premier Borden arose and sympathized with his suburban constituents from whom Hon. Mr. Cochrane is trying to wring money by refusing to run suburban for a time threatened to end in a trains in the evening. Mr. Cochrane has left Ottawa in search of health. Hon. Reid is holding down the militia portfolio and from the expressions of the Government it looks as though St. John ar would hereafter be served by the I. C. R. as they have been in the past and as they desire to be in the future.

There was a discussion afterward on natural resources. In opposition, Mr. Borden promised that if returned to would turn over to the prov power he inces the lands which the Government is giving to immigrants. Today he was asked to declare his position on the proposal which he made to Parliament and to the country through the Halifax In reply he asked the Liberals why they had not given the land to the provinces when they had authority and power to do so. The reply by Mr. McCrany was very effective, for tee Liberals from Saskatoon said that what the country wanted to know was if the man when position had promised something was now prepared to fulfill his promise
