INTERMEDIATE GROUP, NO. 12. London 2 0 St. Marys 0

Special to The Advertiser. Sarnia, Jan. 8.—Art Davenport's Glencoe intermediate squad allowed its reputation to slip, and went down by a score of 6 to 1 to Sarnia here tonight, despite everything Davenport himself could do—and he was the most of the Glencoe team. Every moment was filled with action. Heavy body-checking was a feature, and Davenport was the principal victim. At one time there were four players off the ice. players off the ice

Glencoe didn't have any luck tonight. Their shooting wasn't of the Melton Gets Two.

Melton turned in a sweet game. Several times he bored right through the Glencoe line, and notched two of the counters. O'Brien was missing from the Sarnia line, but Laird filled in well. Clark turned in a good game, but drew several penalties. The first period was the best, with the teams fighting tooth and nail.

One goal at the end of fourteen minutes was made by Clark. Five minutes from the start of the second Mellon skated through and netted one with a fine shot. He renetted one with a fine shot. He re-peated a few minutes later. Towards the end of the period Glencoe took the upper hand, but the Sarnia de-fence prevailed. A minute from the start of the last period Affleck picked up a rebound, and scored Glencoe's lone counter.

The teams: Sarnia—Goal, McAllister; defence, Ferry and Mellon; center, Laird, wings, Jackson and Clark; subs. Crouchman and Burgess.

Glencoe — Goal, Quick; defence, Davenport and Willis; center, Af-fleck; wings, Aldred and Humphrey; subs. Weaver and Harris subs, Weaver and Harris. Referee—Bill McCort, Sarnia.

I am thinking, for instance, of the late Julius Caesar, who in addition to leading the Roman troops on the expedition to Gaul wrote accounts of the late Xenophon, who in addition to handling the retreat of the Ten devoted to this and before it is completed the local curiers will enjoy six or seven weeks of the great winter nastime. disbarment from the Amateur Generals' Association if there had been such an association at the time? Then, too, there was Benvenuto Cellini, who in addition to doing things in marble and gold wrote one fairly good book. Would this lapse into literature have put Signor Cellir' in bad with the Artists' Association if there had been one?

Personally I do not care what action may be taken in regard to Caesar Xenophon, even if it is taken at this late date. From what I remember of Caesar's Commentaries it was fair enough reporting, though it may have given a shade the better of everything to the author, but it was difficult

It always has been my theory that Caesar might not have written his own stuff, but that he might have adopted the methods used by Babe Ruth, Jack Dempsey and the other author athletes and might have hired some reporter to do the actual writing. Then he had the stuff syndicated through the Roman Empire. Some of the gags in the Commentaries could have been written only by a professional.

The same theory goes for Zenophon. After reading a few parasangs of the Anabasis at a very early age I had the suspicion that Xenophon was not writing his own stuff. Understand that this is merely my personal suspicion. The Commentaries and the Anabasis may have been entirely on the up and up. But I would like to see some committee appointed to probe this matter to the bottom and have these boys ruled out of the Generals' League if there was any real violation of the ethics of the league. Sold by druggists or mail $1.00 from Generals' League if there was any real violation of the ethics of the same action should be taken in regard to Benvenuto Cellini.
