The Treaty of Washington Again. It turns out that we were right, or as nearly so as possible, in regard to the turned to Canada when the last mail left: but what was understood to be the version of the position of affairs, had been published, occasioning a leeling of reassurance and joy amongst the Government apporters and causing disappointment and dismay in the ranks of the Opposition. The conviction that Canada will not ratify the perion of the Treaty which concerns ber nore immediate interests appears to gain ground in all the Provinces, and the Press begins to indulge in speculation as to the possible consequences of refusal. Should the war party in the United Blates bluster. and should British statesmen think, as it has been intimated some do think, that the friendship of the United States is worth more to Great Britain than twenty colonies is not impossible that strange complications may grow out of Canada's refusal, Evidently cousin Jonathan holds some nice cards, it he is only inited to play the hold gams which the language of our dispatches poblished yesterday morning attributed to President Grant. To tully Great Britain, and through her, make Canada either give nawilling consent to terms which would suit his interests well, or seek independence.
