TELL'S BIRTH-PLACE.

By S. T. Coleridge. MARK this holy chapel well ! The Birth-place, this, of William Tell. Here, where stands God's alter dread, Stood his parents' marriage-bed.

Mere firet, an infant to ber breast, Him his loving mother prest; And kine d the babe; and bleas d the day. And pray'd as mothers use to pray

" Vouchsate him health, O'God, and give The Child thy servent still to live But God he dest ned to do more Through him, than through an armed power.

God gave him reverance of laws, Yet stining blood in Freedom's cause -A spirit to his rocks akin, The eye of the Hawk, and the fire therein

To Nature and to Holy writ Alone did God the boy commit; Where fineh'd and roas'd the torrent, of His soul found wings, and sear'd aloft

The etraining ear and chamois chase Mad formed his limbs to etrength and grace On wave and wind the boy would toes, Was great, nor knew how great he was

He knew not that his a reen hand, Made stiong by God, his native land Would rescue from the shameful yoke Of Slavery -the which he broke '
