How, from one end of the country to the other, the people were agizated and convulsed, and how O'-Connell's power grewiday by day like, a tide, rising: is apring? This was because the Whigs then repre-gented not merely a few Catholics in third-rate Goin spring? vernment offices, but the principle of Religious Lirernment onces, but he principle of Religious Li-jerty, and of Constitutional Liberty; the Tories re-resented Government by a Protestant faction and severe executive. Well, facts are considerably changed, but names remain. There is a closer relation between the policy of the Catholics and that of the Tories at home, but especially abroad now, than there is with that of the Whigs. Still, an Irish cowd will be shaken by the very word "Orange as-tendency;" and the Whig orators and journalists, howing this, are always ringing the changes on it. Inowing this, are always ringing the changes on it. I distinguished Prelate was asked at Rome, by an minent Catholic statesman in 1858, why he did not apport the Conservative Party—their Foreign Poicy was so manifestly more advantageous to the loly See. The good Prelate trembled, and mur-Orange Ascendency, Orange Ascendency !" was in Ireland at the time, and expressing some uch views as these to an excellent and influential Priest, he said to me, "It is all true, but see the ap-pointments they make, see the magistrates they set printing us.' 'Eh!' said I, 'by the way, what magis-trates have they appointed lately; let us look to the linectory—the Lieutenant of the County is a Cathoic and a Whig, and his assent is necessary, is it ot?" The truth is, there had been no such appointnents, but my reverend friend had read in the Whig apers that there were, and took the fact on trust. this is the way Ireland is led. I venture to say that his idea, which is omnipotent with mobs and parish oliticians, is all but, if not altogether a chimera, which only serves to cloak the venal and servile interests of a small and selfish class.

"The peasantry-after all, Ireland is a peasant nation, in the best sense of the word-what do they think of, in place of politics? How do the people to whom O'Connell addressed those full and elabonte statements of public affairs day after day and ear after year, live an intelligent life without some ubstitute ? Is that keen, active, imaginative Irish nind altogether turned into spiritual regions ? Has he island become one large Living Rosary? And severything viewed through the Ignatian method of meditation? Certainly not. I speak of Parliamentary politics. Take an intelligent peasant, or small shopkeeper, a fair specimen of the County or Borough Elector. Ask him what he thinks of the land Bill or the Irish Reform Bill. Ten to one, you will find he has never given himself the least conern about it. But tell him, how Marshal MacMahon bre his orders, and came up when the fate of the attle trembled at Magenta-tell him how when the ipanish soldiers seemed to waver once at Tetuan, he Captain-General O'Donnell rushed to the front. and turned the tide of war-tell him that old Prince Sugent has become Grand Prior of Ireland in the Order of Malta, and that the Order is arming, like he Crusaders of old, in the Pope's behalf-his eyes fish, his color rises, you will have no cause to complain of his want of vivacity and of eloquence. The mind of Ireland is most curiously involved in what me may call her foreign relations. She is proud to have given Prince Nugent to Austria, the Duke of Ingenta to France, the Duke of Tetuan to Spain, Ingenta to France, the Duke of Tetuan to Spain, resident Buchanan to the United States, Cardinal tained so extended a sale or accomplished so much Viseman to Rome and to England. And these dis-inguished persons are all proud of their Irish pedi-rees. But, except for the chord of national pride which they touch, you would say these were more viriosities of antiquariar. research than motives of iving politics. Yet, believe me, there is a profound much in this. The poetic, devout Irish mind sees in be extraordinary number of men of Irish descent. the occupy great positions in the world at present, know not what dim purpose of Providence. aly name a few, and those few of men, who stand a the next rank to Sovereigns. When one comes o Ministers, you find that half the Cabinet of Spain, and half the Cabinets of the new and growing Comnonwealths of America and Australia, are composed of Irishmen by birth or descent, and in all cases, for this is the really important consideration, Irishmen by strongly declared national sympatics. Distance or time does not seem to take the flavor of the shamrick out of Irish blood. I remember once reading be complaint in an old State Paper on Ireland of te time of Henry the Eighth that the Irishrie of bat period were all familiar with the doings of the King of France, and the King of Spain, and the

CATHARTIC

From a Forwarding Merchant of St. Louis, Feb. 4, 1856. DR. AVER: Your Pills are the paragon of all that is great in medicine. They have cured my little daughter of ulcerous sores upon her hands and feet that had proved incurable for years. America and Australia, for there is a continual ebb and flow of emigration from Ireland towards those countries—and as far as either is Catholic, almost so ar is it Irish; and in the politics of both the 'Irish Vote' is a serious power. You would not wonder, if I told you that there was an American and an iustralian party in Irelaud-seeing that the Times iself prophecies that America is to be the inheriance of the Irish, and that the leading statesmen of Australia are Irish. But how will you explain the act that there is a French party and an Austrian party in Ireland at present-and that the French party seems to be losing ground and the Austrians to be gaining ?

"I feel as if I had led you into the midst of a Paze of contradictions, and I must leave you there. told you when I began, that, in my mind, God lone holds the true clue to the Irish question, and that it is among His secret counsels. All we can see in it is absolutely self-contradictory. The infuence of Ireland in Parliament, during the last Far, used aright, would have been most important to the interests of Rome. It has been grossly miswed. Is Ireland, therefore, disloyal to the Pope?-Ve shall see by and-bye. Is Ireland, on the other iand, loyal to England? So the Irish Bishops and Priests most carnestly declare, and they must know; so the English journals, pointing to the absence of time, and a certain increase of agricultural and commercial prosperity according to the returns, con-stantly asseverate. Nevertheless, England will not allow volunteer corps to be formed in Ireland, and robibits to the population, even for amusement, mining, drilling, and the use of arms. But is Ireand really prosperous? The population is daily diminishing. It is said that the Census for next fear will show a decrease of about three-quarters of million since 1851. Another famine seems to be wooping down on the unfortunate pensantry, and there is a general rush to the emigrant ship. But trade is increasing, property is more equally divided, the general aspect of the country is cleaner and bighter; this large benevolence to the Pope; these tich churches ; do they not bespeak a surplus in the hands of the poor, for it is is the poor who give ?-In fine, I ask you to believe that the Irish mind is usy at once with the Roman Question, and the way he Catholic nations revolve round it-and with the rowing democracies of the New World, where their insmen compose the congregations of the Catholic hurch. Yet I have to assure you that this people of keen wits, large sympathies, and sound instincts are indifferent to the politics that actually lie to beir hands, and that although they know in the exet balance of English Parties, it lies with them to Fut Governments out and in, they will in trath and act only consider in their relations with England be interests of a few lords and a few lawyers, who Polit to the extent of a few thousand pounds a-year.
