Mr. Deputy Speaker: I declare the decision sustained.

Mr. Bert Leboe (Cariboo): In addressing the house for a few minutes on the measure before us for the ratification of the Columbia river treaty, may I first of all take this opportunity to express on behalf of the members of my group and, I think, on behalf of all the members of the committee on external affairs, appreciation of the way in which the chairman of that committee sat through 50 sittings of evidence. I think the hon. member for Leeds (Mr. Matheson) did a very commendable job indeed and I think the members of the committee were very proud of the effort he put forward to make himself acquainted with those matters with which it was necessary he should become familiar. In any case, his conduct of the committee was such as to stand him in good stead as a future chairman of many other committees of this house.

I should like to mention, also, that in my opinion the negotiators of this treaty did an excellent job of probing into the finer points under discussion. I think they were firm. I think they were fair. I am certain that those who sat on the committee were aware of the
