

- Variety of, 70. His immense power, 450.
- Whale-fishery, the objects of, 422. Early practised on the coasts of Europe, 423. Spitzbergen long the seat of it, 424. First fishing voyages to the Arctic Sea, ib. Disputes between the different nations, 425. Dutch fishery, 427. British fishery, 429; encouraged by Government, ib.; bounties granted, and ultimate success, 430. Mode of conducting the fishery, 436; equipment, ib.; voyage, 437; attack and capture of the whale, 438; operation of flensing, 441. Dangers of the whale-fishery, 444. Shipwrecks and accidents, 444-454. Recent changes in the fishing-stations, 454. Increased dangers, 456. Capital invested in the trade, 458; its produce, 460. Ports whence it is carried on, 463. Disasters and shipwrecks of 1830, 464-476; adventures of the shipwrecked crews on the ice, 472; extrication of the remaining vessels, 474; loss sustained, 476. Abstract of the whale-fishings from 1815 to 1834, 477. Statement from 1835 to 1842, 478; details for 1843 and 1844, 479.
- Willoughby, Sir Hugh, voyage of, in search of a North-east Passage, 108. Its disastrous issue, 112.
- Z.
- Zeni (the) and Quirini, expeditions by, 100.

THE END.