to the before . Not of Contion of ndence man of dicious ing for English

n these indeed nciples und in on and s owes itained bilities rinity, ties at tablish med as ity was which atering of proclergylollege, ally an apse of worthy el and proved of his ersonal in the visited. of his g and honoured life he maintained that character for devotion, that reputation for holiness, that fervour of ministrations, that faithfulness in every good word and work, which should characterise the "good man," "full of the Holy Ghost and of faith." Nor was this all. Through his long and earnest labours, ended only when the summons came to depart and be at rest, "much people were added to the Lord." A church was organised; a college was founded and built up to a measure of efficiency and success. The institutions of religion and learning were thus established and supported. The preaching of the Word and the ministration of the Sacraments were provided for the crowds of exiles who, in their devotion to Church and State, had exchanged their American homes for the bleak shores of Nova Scotia, and to the frontier settlers in the dense forests of New Brunswick and Quebec. Thus through unremitting labours, blessed by God, ere the life of the first Colonial Bishop was ended there had been set on foot measures for the development of the Church of Christ in the northern portion of the American Continent which shall act and react for good till time shall be no more.

But our reverent remembrance of this natal day of the British Colonial Episcopate would be incomplete without a reference to the bright galaxy of men, like-minded, and, like Inglis, "full of the Holy Ghost and of faith," who have followed in the list of missionary apostles sent forth during the century now numbered with the past. Men were they of whom the world was not worthy; men who counted not their lives dear to them for the Lord Jesus; men, like the great Apostle, in labours abundant, "in journeyings often," "in perils by the heathen; in perils in the city; in perils in the wilderness; in perils in the sea;" "in weariness and painfulness; in watchings often "; having "the care of all the Churches "; men to whom was given "this grace" that they should preach among the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ. These are the men, the missionary apostles, following in the long catalogue headed by Inglis's name, through whom has been made "known by the Church the manifold wisdom of God." Ah ! blessed be the