

UNITED STATES CAN RAISE LARGE ARMY

Estimate That Eighteen Million Men Could Be Called Out.

BASED UPON CENSUS

More Than Ten Million Men Physically Fit for Service.

New York, Feb. 4.—An army of nearly 18,000,000 men could be called to the colors of the United States, if necessary, according to a carefully prepared estimate made public tonight by the executive committee of Mayor Mitchell's committee on national defence.

London, Feb. 5.—The general tenor of the editorial opinion on the break between the United States and Germany is that there was only one course open to President Wilson, and that he has taken it.

Proportions of Exemptions. In estimating the resources of the nation in men between 18 and 45 years of age, the committee's statement after deductions for "morbidity" physical defects, industrial necessities and dependency of families, placed the number at 4,778,000.

(Continued From Page 1.) these bonds by their future exports. Manifestly, if they win the war they can do so; if they lose, they cannot. It was for this reason that German agents have engaged in so much propaganda in the United States.

The allies will also directly benefit from the seizure of German shipping by the United States at a time when tonnage is becoming scarce. If Latin America follows the action of the United States, as invited, the world will gain, perhaps, a million tons of ships, or twice the net loss caused by German submarine depredations.

Germany broke with the United States because things have become so desperate for her that she is no longer running the war, but the war is running her. Since the alienation of the United States entails obvious disadvantages for Germany, disadvantages not compensated for by the privilege of sinking a few American ships, the dullest can perceive that something gravely wrong exists with the controlling minds of German leadership.

Attacking the Germans on a front of three-quarters of a mile, north of the Ancre, British troops have advanced to a depth of 500 yards, east of Beaumont, taking 100 prisoners and three machine guns. They repulsed two German counter-attacks nearly out of its mind, when Rumanian made a blunder that the Germans could take advantage of and restore their morale to some extent.

On the French front some surprise attacks gained the French prisoners and important information. Their artillery carried out many effective bombardments, notably about Hill 304, northwest of Verdun.
