MAY.—Please don't allow your cattle, pigs, colts and horses to run on the highways and public roads: of course a respectable farmer will not. But there are many careless people whose pastures are poor who do not seem to consider the mischief that may be done by the practice referred to. Many seem to think they have a right to do so. But most of the litigations between farmers have arisen from hungry cattle turning from a dry, barren roadside, and by force entering pasturage or fields where they are intruders and do immense damage to crops. Fences may be ever so high and strong, but some creatures have wonderful skill in removing obstructions, and the best way is for every farmer to keep his cattle, &c, at home.
