In the course of the evening Mr Thomas Dighton the artist was permuted to enter to take a drawing of the scene with the company as they appeared at the banquet from which an engraving is to be taken which the Queen has permitted to be dedicated to her. Since the memorable day when so many of the crowned heads of Europe did honour to the ancient hall by partaking of a civic welcome there has been no attempt till now of eclipsing the splendour then for the first time displayed by gas illumination. The committee spared no expense.—The chief addition made consists of the splendid chandeliers constructed from the classically elegant designs and under the tosteful eye of Col.ins. Between the pannels of painted glass which compose body of these gigantic lamps were placed most scientifically some hundreds of glass ornaments which by their refractive powers becomposed the rays of light into showers of rainbow illusion. - The chanceliers were placed high enough to prevent any interference in the line of sight between the royal table and the brilliant display of gas made at the west end of the Hall. above which the star shone with its bec Suburb, leaning on their arms wonted refulgence from 1,530 grs lights encircled with the words " God save the Queen." The number of burners in these two devices (the star and motto) were 4,500, and the weight of cut-glas was nearly one ton. The arabesque scroll at the eastern window under the motto of "Welcome," and initals 'V. R.," contained more the 2,009 jets of light. But, after all the brilliancy which | cer of the city who was not at the we have attempt to describe as belonging to the two ends of the Hali it was by the unique and most effective disposition attached to the hold comice and Gothic dividuals attended the funeral, but compartments composing the walls of this stately building that the almost overpowering flash of light was obtained .-It is here the magicart of gas-lighting long experience reckoned more was furnished with an unrivalled opport than that number, but we think tunity of displaying itself. LOWER CANADA. MONTREAL, DEC. 9.

The remains of the late Lieut. Weir, of Her Majesty's 32d regt., were yesterday interred with the usual military honors. The circumstances attending his late atrocious murder whilst in the discharge of his duty to his country. have excited feelings of the liveliest detestation of his murderers, and induced the citizans en maese, to follow his remains to the silent tomb. All the Ward and Volunteer Associations joined in the procession, four deep, which was certainly the most numerous we ever saw in this country. The West Ward Volunteers, under the command of Lieut. Col. Maitland, lined the Main street of the Quereversed. The bands of the 32d and Royal Regiments headed the procession, playing the solemn & appropriate Dead March. The Pall was borne by the officers of the 32d regt. behind whom were Sir John Colborne and every offitime on duty. Lieut. Weir was in the 29th year of his age. It is impossible to state how many it they must have numbered 7,000 or 8,000. A military gentleman of our éstimate is correct. THE SONG OF BARDS ROSE OVER THE DEAD.

*Pleasant be the spirits dwelling Mighty Semo's Son;

Awful 'mid the battle's swelling Was thy dread arm known: Like the torrent's strength thy might. Vefore the Eagle's pinion Depths ethernal yield; o thy flaming sword's dominion Own'd the battle-field.

Death behind thee took delight Undisturbed may'st thou lie Car-borne chieftain of Dunscai !"

'Yet'twas not the strong man's weapon That thy death-wound gave: Neither did thy life-blood drip on Jarelin of the brave:

Like to death's Blast-shrouded sting, Came the winged arrow swerveless On its path of speed; Neither knew the slayer nerveless Aught of the dark deed.

Pleasant be thy slumbering In thy cave unbroke the while, Chieftain of the misty Isle!"
