POOR DOCUMENT

DETECTIVE DOWNEY.

By MRS. CASHEL HOEY.

Detective Downey had formerly belonged to "the force," but he had retired and set up on his own account, in consequence of the divergence of his views from those of his superior officers, and his rooted belief that there existed in this country but one real adept in detection, whose name was Richard Downey. The man was an enthusiast in his calling, and he held none, living or dead, in such reverence as its great chiefs, even the apocryphal ones. For him M. Decoq was as authentic as Napoleon Bonaparte, and he would have given the pay of a great many jobs to have possessed a fat forefinger like Inspector Bucket's; but failing that, he did his best to make a lean one emphatic. He was a little dark man with twinkling eyes, a self satisfied smirk, and he had a fixed idea that at the bottom of every crime and misdemeanor that departs from, or, so to speak, rises above the lowest of the vulgar, there is a woman! He did not persuade himself that his fixed idea was an original one; on the contrary, he rendered sincere homage to the promulgator of it, and regarded the distinguished utterer of the famous phrase, "Cherchez la femme," as a wiser than Solomon, although after all he only gave to that sage's conclusions an epigrammatic form. Of course his fixed idea led him wildly wrong on some occasions, but it had guided him straight enough on others; he had a respectable list of criminal convictions to his credit, and was, probably, as happy a man as one could meet in a day's walk. Whether he aspired to the immortality of a volume of memoirs was known only to himself; it looked like it, for the invariable occupation of his leisure was the copying and arrangement of a voluminous mass of notes.

Such was the man, a queer specimen of a strange class, to whom the elegantly dressed lady, on whom he waited at the appointed time, gave an agitated and not very clear account of her loss of a valuable diamond star. He received the communication without comment, but made elaborate notes, and complimented the perturbed lady on her foresight in bringing the four remaining stars for him to see, although, he added, one would have been sufficient for purposes of identification. Mr. Morrison was present at the interview, but took no part in the narrative of the loss of the star, and on its conclusion locked up the jewel case in his safe, at the suggestion of Downey, who inclined to the belief that the robbery was a put up affair, and suggested that it would be well to inquire into the antecedents of Mrs. Morrison's maid. But this theory was impatiently routed by Mr. Morrison intervening to explain that Louise had not known until she had to dress her mistress for the ball that Mrs. Morrison intended to wear her diamonds. Downey regretfully accepted the conclusion that the case was only one of common "grabbing" after all, for he dearly loved a complication, and was especially partial to affairs in which household treachery was a leading agent. He took his leave, having laid due professional emphasis on the difficulties presented by the case, and went away wishing that the job were of a higher order, that, for instance, Mrs. Morrison —like so many ladies in fact and fiction —had stolen her own diamonds, from motives of which it would have been joy to him to discover and expose. "La femme," in the character of a claimant in a case of legitimate grievance, interested Mr. Downey only moderately.

In the course of that day Mr. Morrison's message of the previous morning was answered from Melbourne, but not by Mr. Barrington. An agent telegraphed, "Barrington sailed on first." This was startling news; the margin of safety was contracting. When Mr. Morrison left the bank that afternoon, after he had transacted some very important business, he wired to his wife that he should be detained in town, and betook him in a hansom to a street of very modest pretensions in Pimlico. There he dismissed his cab, and carrying his inseparable black hand bag, he walked on to the far end of the street, knocked at the door of a house, bearing a small brass plate inscribed "Josephus," and was admitted. From that house Mr. Morrison came out only just in time to catch the latest train for Riversdale.

"Josephus isn't a bad fellow at all," said Mr. Morrison to his wife, after he had run through the narrative of his proceedings subsequent to the receipt of the startling telegram; "for that sort of man, he's a very good fellow. Of course it has to be made worth his while, but then, it is so well worth ours, now that the push has come. The whole thing disposed of by private contract, the money paid down to-morrow, and nothing touched until all is safe. I really don't see how we could have done better."

"The things cost twice the money," said Mrs. Morrison ruefully.

A BABY IN DANGER.

My baby was taken very bad with diarrhœa; nothing did any good until I tried Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. I am certain nothing equals it, and could not do without it in time of summer complaint and diarrhœa. MRS. A. L. BUIE, Shell River, Man.

EXCELS ALL OTHERS.

I used one bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters for constipation and loss of appetite and it cured me. I would not be without it at six times the price for it excels all others. WILLIAM WALTON, Galt, Ont.

MYSTIC WORDS.

I can recommend Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry for chronic diarrhœa, as I have used it for two years and can get nothing else that helps me like it. JANE TAYLOR, Mystic, P. Q. This medicine cures all summer complaints.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills are recommended by the best physicians, because they are free from calomel and other injurious drugs, being composed of purely vegetable ingredients. While thorough in their action, they stimulate and strengthen the bowels and secretory organs.

Some of the obstructions in Grand Falls are being removed by the Dominion government by blasting.

For restoring the color, thickening the growth, and beautifying the hair, and for preventing baldness, Hall's Hair Renewer is unsurpassed.

All attempts to float the steamer "Bessie Morris" at Quebec have proved futile and she will be wrecked.

"I was troubled with Catarrh for over, two years. I tried various remedies, and was treated by a number of physicians, but received no benefit until I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. A few bottles of this medicine cured me."—Jesse M. Boggs, Holman's Mills, N. C.
