

German.

Grammar.
Adler's Reader, Section II.....	} 100 marks.
Translation from German into English.

(2) Mathematics, Natural Philosophy, &amp;c.

Geometry.

Euclid, I. II. III.....	150 do.
-------------------------	---------

Algebra.....

Elementary rules, Involution, Evolution, Fractions, Simple Equations.	} 150 do.

Natural Philosophy.

Mechanics and Hydrostatics. (As in Loomis).....	100 do.
---	---------

Elementary Mensuration of Surfaces and Solids,

(as in Chambers's Educational Course).....	100 do.
--	---------

Mechanical and Architectural Drawing .....	100 do.
---	---------

(3) English.

The English Language:—

Earl's Philology of the English Tongue, Historic Sketch and chaps. V to VIII.	} 100 do.
Trench's Study of Words.

English Literature.

English Literature. Primer by S. A. Brooke.	} 100 do.
Scott's Lady of the Lake.
Addison's Sir Roger de Coverley.

Additional Marks, not exceeding 50, may be allowed in the literature paper for quality of Composition.

History ,—Freeman's General European History.....	100 do.
--	---------

Geography ,—Physical, Political and Commerical.....	100 do.
--	---------

Instead of passing in one or more subjects of the English Section, Candidates may, if they prefer it, pass in one or more of the following subjects:—

(4) Natural Science.

Zoology , (as in Paterson's Zoology for Schools.).....	100 do.
---	---------

Botany , (as in Gray's First Lessons).....	100 do.
---	---------

Geology , (as in Dana's Text-Book).....	100 do.
--	---------

Chemistry (as in Miller's Introduction to Inorganic Chemistry).....	100 do.
--	---------

Every Candidate must pass in at least one, and not more than three subjects in each of the Optional Sections.

No Candidate will be considered as having passed in any of the above Optional Subjects, unless he has obtained at least one-fourth of the total number of Marks obtainable in that subject.

Any Candidate who passes in more than one subject of any section, and who in at least one of those subjects obtains more than half the total number of Marks, will be entitled to a Certificate of creditable answering, in that subject.