We have not the slightest doubt that the Ministers, when they realise how false Mr. Mitchell has been to his constituency, and unmindful of the interests in England have been seeking to revenge them selves on Canada for the N. P. This is most unlikely. By imposing heavy duties on goods you do not make the dealers in them your friends; but the British manufacturers set little store on the Canadian market, and they certainly would not combine for the purpose of crying down a loan. When such thoughts, however, find expression, we see once more how small is the value to England of the name of political supremacy compared with the liabilities which it entails. Its favorable effect even on the sentiment of Canadians towards the Mother Country is evidently far from unequivocal.—The Week.
