WALKING FOR LIFE.

A resident of San Francisco, Charles E. Norris, a victim of the ravages of consumption, was told by his doctor to "go home and die comfortably."

It is three years since he set out on his walk against death, and his record is now 11,340 miles. Though sixty-three years old Norris has combined with the exertions of a rugged life the career of striving for existence. This constant striving he regards as an essential part of his cure.

He has been asked to take others with him on his tramp, but has refused unless they agree to go as he is--peniless. If they are able to afford the luxuries of good hotels, snug beds, rich foods, they stand small chance of being cured," he says.

Because of his clean clothes, Norris is regarded by the professional tramps with suspicion, and often he is mistaken by them for a detective. He is now writing a book of his experiences.

HIS HAT BETRAYED HIM.

Jerry Marr Swore He Didn't Hit Dan O'Leary, But Jury Wouldn't Believe Him.

An assault case in which the establishment of the prisoner's guilt rested mainly on the identity of the ownership of hats occupied the attention of the county court this morning. On the 13th of last month, along in the evening, Daniel O'Leary, who resides on Smythe street, was knocked senseless on Pond street, about one hundred yards from the Grand Union Hotel. A few minutes before O'Leary had been in a bar at the Grand Union coxing the bartender for a drink of ale. He had no more than taken a few sips when a man, supposed to have been Jeremiah Marr, who is held for the assault, entered and asked him to set up the drinks. O'Leary said something about not being able to, which the other seemingly construed into an insult sufficiently provocative to warrant the threat, "I'll get even with you for that." O'Leary then left and so did the man who threatened him. It was just a few minutes after that O'Leary received what he described as his "knock-out" Marr defended himself and Hon. H. A. McKeown presided.

Dr. Berryman was the first witness. He told of being called to the Water street lock-up to dress the injuries of O'Leary. He said that O'Leary had sustained two bad wounds, one of them being a gashy cut on the head which had to be stitched up. Dan O'Leary, the complainant, sworn, gave a fairly clear account of what took place before he was battered. He remembered the prisoner asking him for a drink at the Grand Union bar, but he could not swear that it was the prisoner who struck him. The blow he received rendered him unconscious for a few minutes, and when he came to he picked up a cap, which he afterwards discovered was not his own.

O'Leary identified as his the hat which the police found the prisoner wearing. When questioned by the prisoner, O'Leary said that he could not swear that it was his assailant. Officer Crawford told of the arrest of the men and how afterwards he visited the scene of the assault where he found a broken flask. Jas. H. Harley, clerk of the Grand Union, said that both men were in the Grand Union bar that evening, but he did not remember seeing them together. O'Leary was ordered away twice. He came back a third time and was given a drink. He came back a fourth time with his head bleeding, unable to tell who had hit him. Marr took the stand and denied any knowledge of the assault. His honor, in charging the jury, said that although the evidence was not clear, he was satisfied that O'Leary was the man who struck Marr with his head bleeding, unable to tell who had hit him.

BASEBALL IS EXCITING.

Brutal Fight on Union Street, the Outcome of Tuesday's Scrap. There was a lively fracas in a beer shop on Union street Tuesday night, when one man was badly beaten and several others considerably bruised and cut. It is stated that the row was the outcome of the fight that took place in the grandstand at Tuesday afternoon's game on the athletic grounds. Several of the supporters and friends of both teams were present and got mixed up in the row. The proprietor did his best to quiet the affair but only succeeded in doing so after the wrath of the ringleaders had been cooled down by a liberal flow of blood.

The Kennecott Journal says: "The playing of both teams was of the kind to dream about and then lie awake and reflect on.
