SIXTY YEARS IN WILDERNESS.

Some Passages in the Life of Henry W. Lucy, "Toby, M. P.," Parliamentary Reporter.

Mr. Lucy's life has been full of experiences, and it has been made additionally interesting by a wide acquaintance with famous politicians and men of letters, so that his self-deprecating title is somewhat misleading. His wilderness was largely laid in the English House of Commons, where as a Parliamentary reporter for much he won fame under the pseudonym of "Toby, M. P." He has been painted by John Gargrave. He has been up in a balloon at Crystal Palace and down in a silver mine in Leadville and in a submarine. He has known Gladstone, Beaconsfield, Henry, Mark Twain, Fred Burnaby, Du Maurier and John Tenniel.

It was on the occasion of his balloon ascent that he first met Fred Burnaby. Just on the point of starting a storm. The great globe of silk swayed and hissed and hissed and hissed. "A middle aged gentleman who had come down to town from Cambridge and arrived at his seat fearfully late. I followed, making myself as scarce as possible at the bottom of the car. Then tumbled in a handsome fellow, six foot four in height, broad chested to boot. I remembered wondering when he would finish getting his full length in. This was Fred Burnaby, ranking at the time as Captain in the Horse Guards, barracks, with Khiva unapproached, the wilds of Asia Minor untrodden by his horse's hoofs. Like Mr. Lucy, he had secured a seat only because a lot of passengers had been scared by the expected storm. "As things turned out we had a delightful trip, rising to a flight of three thousand feet clear of the storm."

From a personal letter of Archibald Forbes, Mr. Lucy quotes an interesting description of Burnaby's death. "A foot spearman dashed at Burnaby, pointing at his throat, the broad, sharp blade of his eight foot long spear, Burnaby, parried, and wounded the Moslem. The duel between them continued for about a minute, Burnaby cutting, pointing and parrying, the supple Arab lunging viciously at the British officer fast in the saddle. A second Arab, daring by in pursuit of a skirmisher, with a sudden turn ran his spear into Burnaby's right shoulder from behind. A soldier darted out and bayoneted this man. Burnaby glanced over his shoulder for a second at the transaction, and in that second his first antagonist dashed, his spear full into Burnaby's throat. He fell from the saddle, the blood spurting from his jugular; as he sank the Arab stabbed usually gave a dinner once a week through the Parliamentary session. They were all interesting, though saddened for some by the circumstance that Russell not only did not smoke himself, but resolutely refused to be smoked by others. It was poor consolation for men accustomed to regard a cigar as not the least delectable adjunct to a dinner to see the host spooning snuff into his nostrils, and flourishing the witnesses, the dompter of juries."

Mark Twain, likewise, has a chapter to himself. To Mr. Lucy he once made a banquet proposition that the two of them should join in the publication of a paper called "The Obituary," suggesting that a wealthy person, and write in the form of an obituary notice a sketch of his career and then a study of his character, involving heinous charges, embodying an appreciation of his character likely to make him turn in his freshly dug grave. The article, being set up in type, was to be sent to the subject with a letter suggesting that unless the two conspirators received down on the nail a sum ranging from £100 to £500, the estimated capacity of his purse, the article would appear in "The Obituary" contemporaneously with the announcement of his death.

Another obituary scheme is outlined in a letter which Mark Twain forwarded to Mr. Lucy under pretence that it should be sent to several well known editors:

"Sir—I am approaching seventy; it is in sight. It is only three years away. Necessarily, I must go soon. It is but a matter-of-course wisdom when I should begin to set my worldly house in order now, so that it may be done calmly and with thoroughness, in place of waiting until the last day, when, as we have often seen, the attempt to set both houses in order at the same time has been marred by the necessity for haste and by the confusion and waste of time arising from the inability of the notary and the ecclesiastic to work together harmoniously, taking turn about and giving each other friendly assistance, not, perhaps, in mind, which could hardly be expected, but at least in the minor offices of keeping game and umpiring. By consequence of which conflict of interest and absence of harmonious action a draw has frequently resulted when this ill fortune could not have happened if the houses had been set in order one at a time, and hurry avoided by beginning in season and giving to each the amount of time fairly and justly proper to it."

"In setting my earthly house in order I find it of moment that I should attend in person to one or two matters which men in my position have long had the habit of leaving wholly to others, with consequences often most regrettable. I wish to speak of only one of these matters at this time. Obituaries. Of necessity, an obituary is a thing which cannot be so judiciously edited by any hand as that of the subject of it. In such a work it is the facts that are of chief importance, but the light which the obituaries shall throw upon them, the meanings which shall be drawn from them, the conclusions which shall draw from them and the judgments which he shall deliver upon them. The verdicts, you understand. That is the danger line."

"In considering this matter, in view of my approaching change, it has seemed to me wise to take such measures as may be feasible to secure, by courtesy of the press, access to my standing obituaries, with the privilege of this is not asking too much—of editing, not their facts, but their verdicts. This, not for present profit, further than as concerns my family, but as a favorable influence usable on the other side, where there are some who are not friendly to me.

"With this explanation of my motives I will now ask you of your courtesy to make an appeal for me to the public press. It is my desire that such a banquet proposition as have obituaries of me lying in their pigeon holes, with a view to sudden use some day, will not wait longer, but will publish them now and kindly send me a marked copy. My address is simply New York city. I have no other that is permanent and not transient.

"I will correct them—not the facts, but the meanings which shall have a mournful influence on the other side, and replacing them with clauses of a more judicious character. I should, of course, expect to pay double rates for both the omissions and the substitutions; and I should also expect to pay quadruple rates for all obituaries which proved to be rightly and wisely worded in the originals, thus requiring no emendations at all.

"It is my desire to leave these Amended Obituaries neatly bound behind me as a perennial consolation and entertainment to my family, and as an heirloom which shall have a mournful, but definite, commercial value for my remote posterity.

"I beg, sir, that you will insert this Advertisement and send the bill to 'Yours very respectfully,

MARK TWAIN.

EXPO. DIRECTORS TO MEET NEXT WEEK

In conversation with The Star this morning, A. O. Skinner stated that a meeting of the directors of the Exhibition Association would be held early next week to make definite arrangements for the Dominion fair.

The probable discussion will centre around means of advertising, as it seems the most important feature of the present time.

Mr. Skinner feels confident that with this help from the federal government the exhibition of 1910 in St. John will equal if not surpass any previous Dominion fair yet held.

How to Avoid Sea Sickness

Take along a box of Mother's Sea and Train Sickness Remedy. It has recently been thoroughly tested on English and Irish Channels and found absolutely reliable. Recommended editorially by such papers as London Daily Express, and the Press generally in Great Britain. Analyzed by Sir Charles A. Cameron, C.B., M.D. Guaranteed perfectly harmless and if not satisfactory money refunded. Write for booklet and press notices and testimonials from promised people. For sale at first-class druggists, or send direct to Mother's Remedy Co., 248 Cleland Bldg., Detroit, Michigan. For sale and recommended in St. John by A. Chipman Smith, G. A. Moore, Royal Pharmacy, and G. A. Becker.

ASEPTO makes clothes whiter, fresher, cleaner, than any soap can make them. Sterilizes everything it comes in contact with—is perfectly odorless. For washing clothes, bedding and various fabrics, dishes, pots and pans, use one tablespoonful of ASEPTO to a bucket of water. After the wash, pour the wash-water into the sink—and sink and drain pipes will be completely disinfected. Invaluable in cases of infectious diseases, as ASEPTO kills all disease germs present in the bedding and dishes used in the sick-room. ASEPTO costs but 5 cts. a package—but when compared with ordinary washing compounds ASEPTO would be dirt cheap at double the price.

ASEPTO has been analyzed by eminent physicians and found to be all we claim for it.
