

NEWEST MATERIALS

For Ladies' Suits and Dresses
Just Opened Up for Fall Trade

Charming Silks, Rich Silk and Wool Fabrics, splendid range of Wool Serges, Panamas, Checks, etc. Purchasing early and in quantities to get special prices enables us to price these early shipments at a saving of 10% to 25% to that which will have to be charged for later buying. We state these facts for our customers' benefit. A little later on they will realize the wisdom of that early purchase.

BUY WOOLLENS AND LINENS NOW. These goods will be scarce and much higher later on. BUY COTTON GOODS ANY TIME as the price will show little change excepting in "Colored Cottons." The dye question is a serious one; keep your household supplies well filled in Prints, Gingham, Galateas, Shirtings, Denims, Wrapperettes and Chintz, for these are goods with the guaranteed aniline dye. Substitutes for aniline will have to be used soon and then comes the trouble on wash days.

There Never Was a Year When Early Buyers Will Reap Such Benefits

We do not urge extravagance but we do urge buying necessities at the opportune time. RECEIVING EARLY IMPORT ORDERS.—We are now passing into stock large quantities of the most carefully selected stock of merchandise this store has ever shown. Buying always from manufacturers with a reputation for quality and value, paying spot cash for every dollar's worth the minute the goods are checked off in the store, to save every cent in discounts in order to keep prices within reason.

Another Shipment of Woollen
Blankets and Woollen Yarns

Direct from same mills as supplied R. C. Vause. These goods are so well and favorably known we do not have to go into details. The difference in quality in these homespun goods and homeknit socks and mitts from the ordinary factory stuff is such that the demand will likely far exceed the supply.

stayed out of the war, Germany had begged her to stay out of the war. Disgraced she might have been—as Britons think, must have been—if she had left Belgium and France and European liberty to their doom.

"But she could have done this. Few nations are without disgrace. With-out Britain might have stood clear, might have husbanded her resources of men and money, might swiftly have prepared, even might have loomed over the stricken adversaries in the end and claimed the hegemony of Europe for herself.

"Britain did not do so. She threw her trident into the scale. She threw her sword into the scale. She threw her gold into the scale—and she is incalculably rich.

"She threw into the balance her impressive racial record, her prestige, her unswerving diplomatic skill. She threw into the balance the whole puissance of her Empire.

"And all for what? For the principle—the fruits of the principle—the liberty of the individual against the despotism of the State.

"Britain, one can believe, may be the author of some acts of which she is not proud—may have done some things to cause her to look back upon them with full light, to wish they had never been done. But in this war this old and proud democracy is unfolding, applying a material strength and a moral splendor that for countless ages after this conflict is still will be shining undimmed amid the first glories of history.

Many a man has been afflicted with a lot of memory after touching a friend for a ten-spot.

Every Town Has Them.

Every town has some one store where the loafers congregate to regulate the universe.

Every town has a postoffice and a lot of folks who call for mail every day and never get any.

Every town has a horrible example. He gets drunk, won't work, but his wife supports him and loves him with a dog-like fidelity no decent man can ever hope to receive.

Every town has its old skinkin' who discounts notes, buys up land, dresses like a tramp and won't get his wife a new gown.

Every town has a 'bad boy' that all parents hold in horror, and all boys love.

Every town has its champion liar, that lies for praise when he can't find anything to lie about.

Every town has its vicious tongued woman, who makes trouble as the sparks fly upward.

Every town has its village atheist. Every town has its arguer, who will challenge any statement you may make, and prove it's not so.

Every town has its giggling girls who giggle over the railway station about the time No. Six is due and walk up and down the platform with their arms about each other.

Every town has its loud-mouthed citizen who cuts in without making a noise like a megaphone.

Every town has its leading citizen who leads every committee and always has a seat on the platform when there is anything going on.

Every town has its nice, speak-easy, hand-shaking creature, who tries to be popular with everybody, and whom nobody likes.

Every town has its grouch-face, who is unfailingly confident the worst is yet to come.

Every town has a group of men who know that the town is morally the worst in the Province.

Every town has a man who never wears a collar, and a dude who pastes down his hair and sports a pink striped shirt.

Every town has its own particular brand of fool.

Every town carries its own peculiar type of religious cranks.

Every town has a man who laughs like an idiot at his own wit.

Every town has its bully, who is afraid to death of his wife.

Every town has men and women who hate the place and are always wishing they lived somewhere else.

In other words every town is as chock-full of human nature as every other town.

Why move?

A lady writes: "I was enabled to remove the corns, root and branch, by the use of Holloway's Corn Cure." Others who have tried it have the same experience.

BLOOD OF THE VIKINGS.

The Men Whose Descendants Conquered Normandy and England.

The Vikings and their followers who swarmed up the Seine and the Thames and whose descendants conquered Normandy and then England were bred of long years of independence and property rights, while those they over-threw were dependent and nonland-owners. They were the hardest and boldest travelers of their time.

The Norwegian seamen still cruise about the sea as far north as it is open, and the history of polar exploration has been associated with Norway from Othar in King Alfred's time to Nansen in our own. In the Shetland islands the people still talked Norwegian in the last century, Greenland and Iceland were colonized from Nor-way, and from Iceland comes a literature in old Norwegian, still the lan-guage of the people, which ranks with the hero tales of the east, of Greece, of Germany and England.

The Orkneys, the Shetlands, the Hebrides and the Isle of Man were possessions of Norway for hundreds of years, and for more than 300 years Norwegian kings ruled in Dublin. Many of the Danes who conquered England were Norsemen, and the con-querors of Normandy were mostly of the Norwegian viking breed.—Price Collier in Scribner's Magazine.

TWO VIEWS OF A DANDY.

In Which Carlyle and Dr. Holmes Took Opposite Sides.

When your gaze runs afoul of a male adorned with a wrist watch and pink socks and a purple necktie, think kindly or unkindly of him—it all depends upon whether you swear by Thomas Carlyle or Oliver Wendell Holmes, both of whom have furnished intimate descriptions of the "dandy." Says the former in "Sartor Resartus": "A dandy is a clothes wearing man—a man whose trade, office and exist-ence is the wearing of clothes. Every faculty of his soul, spirit, purse and person is heroically consecrated to this one object, the wearing of clothes wisely and well, so that, as others dress to live, he lives to dress."

And now look on the other side of the picture furnished by Holmes: "There came Alphonse, the 'curled son of Clinton,' an accomplished young man, but what would be called a 'swell' in these days. There was Aristotle, a distinguished writer of whom you have heard—a regular dandy he was. So was Marcus Antoninus, so was Sir Humphry Davy, so was Lord Palmerston, if I am not forgetful. Dandies such as I was speaking of have rocked this planet like a cradle—aye, and left it swaying to this day."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Frederick's War on Coffee.

In a manifesto issued by Frederick the Great in 1779 the mighty monarch deplored "the increased consumption of coffee by my subjects and the amount of money that goes out of the country in consequence. Everybody is using coffee. This must no longer be. My subjects must drink beer. His majesty was brought up on beer, and so were his ancestors. Innumerable battles have been fought and won by soldiers nourished on beer, and the king does not believe that coffee drink-ing soldiers can be depended upon to endure hardships or to conquer his enemies should another war occur." Coffee roasting was made a govern-ment monopoly, and a prohibitive price was charged for the berry. "Coffee smelters" were appointed all over Prussia to check illicit roasting. Coffee was therefore ousted from popular fa-vor.—London Chronicle.

When Napoleon Died.

July 10, 1821.—The news has just ar-rived of the death of Napoleon. He died on the 5th of May. I was much astonished at the way the news was received. The hero which the whole French nation had worshiped, whom all Europe had trembled before, it might have been an ordinary actor who had died. Really one could feel great disgust. A mighty man indeed he was with all his faults. The first I heard of it was cried about the streets, "La Mort de Napoleon a St. Helene, Deux Sous." Oh, the irony of it!—"A Diary of James Gallatin in Eu-rope" in Scribner's Magazine.

Glancing Blows.

Testy Old Woman.—There now! I guess you won't go around poking your nose into other people's business after the raking I just gave you. Re-porter.—Well, don't get proud about it, madam. You didn't hurt my feelings much. I've been insulted by experts.—Life.

Not a Complaint.

"Of what complaint," asked the in-surance agent, "did your father die?" "Well," was the reply, "it was not exactly in a sort of way, as it were, a complaint precisely, if you under-stand me. The fact is the jury found him guilty."—London Telegraph.

Sorrow in the Sanctum.

When an editor laboriously cuts down a candidate's eight column speech to two columns the candidate is mad at him for printing so little of it, and everybody else is in a like frame of mind toward him for print-ing so much.—Ohio State Journal.

The Difference.

"Say, papa," asked little Roy, "what is the difference between an optimist and a pessimist?" "An optimist," replied papa, "thinks the times are ripe, while a pessimist thinks they are rotten."—Ladies' Home Journal.

It should be known by everybody in these days of gasoline lamps and stoves that gasoline will not explode until its fumes have been mixed with at least six parts of atmospheric air. Gasoline will catch fire as quickly as any liquid known, but let it alone and it will burn out, doing no damage and leaving no scar or sign of fire. Mixed with air in proportions mentioned it is far more dangerous than dynamite. No receptacle of this liquid should ever be left uncorked for to do so is to make the room where it is kept far worse than a powder magazine. This matter of safely handling gasoline is very easy, and no one should be ignorant of how it is done.

Tribute to John Bull.

The following notable editorial is taken from the Chicago Daily News:

"BRITAIN'S PART.
"Here are some of the things Britain is doing:—
"1. Holding the seas for the ships of her allies as well as for her own.
"2. Protecting the coasts of her allies as well as her own.
"3. Struggling in co-operation with the French to smash the Turks and win the Balkans for the allied cause.
"4. Rendering great aid to French and Belgian troops in resisting the terrible onslaughts of the Germans on the allied left wing in the west.
"5. Making loans and supplying munitions to nearly all her partners in the war.
"6. Pursuing a financial policy in South-eastern Europe likely to promote the cause of the nationalities.
"7. Putting into the field more than ten times as many men as she ever promised.
"8. Guarding her own soil and people against an invasion, which, if it came—and it is believed to be far from impossible—doubtless would be the most savage, the most unsparring ever known. With how many men?
Well with enough. To hear some people talk, one would suppose that upon Britain were laid the duty of defending every land but her own.
"Britain's wealth and sea power and military power are the one sure safeguard against the triumph of Germany's unparalleled war machine.
Without Britain's help France and Russia certainly must have been crushed. Without Britain's whole-hearted participation in the war, who will say that Italy would have ventured to challenge the mighty and merciless Germanic coalition? With Britain—out of the struggle, would there have been any hope of the Balkan States being to move?
"And Britain—never forget it—was not compelled to go to the aid of France. Come what might, the most that ever Britain promised France was six divisions—20,000 men. She was not in honor bound to send a single soldier more. She could have
