Cops raid U of T doves for bombs

TORONTO

Prominent anti-Viet Nam war leaders at the University of Toronto had their homes searched last week by police after the homes of 13 Hawker Siddeley officials were bombed.

Hawker Siddeley was accused by anti-war groups last year of aiding the American forces in Viet Nam.

Police raided eight houses with warrants to search for "chemicals, explosives and plumbing." The bombs were made from pipes containing an explosive.

The majority of those investigated were U of T students.

"The news suggests Hawker Siddeley executives' homes were attacked in reprisal for their supplying war goods to the U.S.," said U of T professor Chandler Davis.

Radical CUS mag going bankrupt

OTTAWA

Canada's national student magazine, Issue, is only a year old but is already running into severe financial troubles.

Advertisers are wary of supporting the CUS-sponsored magazine because of the adverse publicity given to the recent CUS conference. At least two advertisers have refused to support the "radical" paper.

Peter Allnutt, editor, said the magazine will continue to be published until "no longer financially feasible."

Edmonton profs open up council

EDMONTON

The general Faculty Council at the University of Edmonton has opened eight more committees to students.

The council is responsible for academic affairs at the university, the equivalent to the university senate at most Canadian universities. It has had three student members since April 1967.

Students want to pick own dean

REGINA

Dean Alwyn Berland resigned as dean of the Arts and Sciences at the University of Saskatchewan Sept. 20 because he "lost confidence in the university's administration and the future of the university."

New students want to make sure the next dean will be selected without interference from the administration Berland couldn't work with. Over 850 students voted to set up a student-faculty committee to select the dean.

A student spokesman said the only way a dean could function was if he were responsible to the students and faculty rather than the administration.

Court kills Strax sit-in

FREDERICTON

A court injunction requested by the University of New Brunswick's administration has ended a five day sit-in at the office of professor Dr. Norman Strax.

The sit-in has been protesting Strax's suspension by the administration. He and 50 students have been occupying the office since Sept. 26.

Strax had been active in the formation of Struggle for a Democratic Society at the university.

York sour on student power

by Dave Cooper

York's Young Socialist Club sponsored a panel discussion on student power last Friday and, as usual, nobody gave a damn.

The panelist that everyone came to see was Andy Wernick, educational director for the U of T student council, and he didn't show.

John Adams was there but didn't say anything of interest, and Harry Kopyto, a Young Socialist from Osgoode, spouted the young socialist line to perhaps 15 young indifferents.

The meeting was a general all-round fiasco. It began in the Vanier JCR at noon and continued there for about 10 minutes while the two rival factions — the speakers (both of them) and the bridge players (countless thousands) — tried to out-shout one another.

Needless to say, the bridge players won out and the meeting retired to the social and debates room, where it woke up and otherwise inflicted itself upon the hapless souls sleeping there.

Kopyto had a lot of good ideas but no real effective plans for implementing them. His suggestions included abolishing tuition fees so that any deserving person could go to university, no age discrimination, a living allowance for students and free text books.

He went on to say that the faculty should be enlarged, the defence budget should be reduced to pay for more education and that the universities should be run by the faculty and students, not big business.

As everyone left for their one o'clock class, Kopyto was still maintaining that the board of governors should be abolished and that the university should sever its connections with big business. There was just a touch of panic in his voice.

Grave blocks campus road

The body of Peter Kaiser is buried in the path of the new access road leading into the campus from the west, and it must be moved, but where to?

Kaiser came to Canada as a United Empire Loyalist and settled in North York in 1780. His farm is now the York campus and the Pioneer Village to the west.

When Kaiser died in 1824 he was buried beside a cherry tree on his farm. His sons were buried on the farm later in what is now the historical cemetery of Pioneer Village.

The logical place for reburial is with his sons in the Pioneer Village Cemetery, but it has been declared closed under Ontario Law. No further burials are permitted there.

Kaiser's direct descendant, also named Peter Kaiser, wants the grave to be transferred to the Pioneer Village Cemetery.

North York Controller Basil Hall and Labor Minister Dalton Bales are trying to find a loophole. "Obviously that's where he should be buried," Hall said. "He was one of the first if not the first pioneer in what is now North York."
