

Serbia, a Sketch

BY HELEN LEAH REED

Author of

Napoleon's Young Neighbor, Miss Theodora, etc.

Published for the benefit of the Serbian Distress Fund, Boston; 128 pages, five illustrations. Of this new book Basil King, the novelist, who is deeply interested in Serbia, writes:

"Of all histories, that of Serbia is least known to the majority of American students. None however is more interesting, touching, or dramatic. It reads like an epic poem. In it there is an Homeric quality. It is a history to be sung, as sung it was and is. All this and much more is ably given in Helen Leah Reed's admirable monograph on this noble, patient people. She has condensed their story into a form which he who runs may easily read, and yet has given the gist of it to such a degree that no important character or event is missed. From the early migration out of Galicia to the tragic flight in 1915 she unfolds a tale as engrossing as Treasure Island. One admires, one pities, one almost weeps. That so splendid a race should always have been beaten and buffeted and oppressed, defeated and frustrated, kept ignorant and poor, and knocked down at their every effort to rise, is in its way a criticism on all human kind. To the average reader Miss Reed's profoundly striking sketch will come as a revelation."
