CHATS WITH YOUNG MEN

DO YOUR WORK

This world wants its work done and does not want excuses to explain why it is not done:

Make good! Don't explain! Do the thing you are expected to do!

Don't waste time in giving reasons
why you didn't or couldn't, or wouldn't, ouldn't!

It I hire you to cook for me, I ex-pect my chops and baked potatoes on time, done to a turn and appetiz-ing; I am not interested in the butcher's mistake, nor the stove's defect, nor in the misery in your left You can't eat explanations.

If I hire you to take care of my automobile, or factory, or shirt waist counter, I do not want to hear why things are half done; I want re-

So also if you come to me and hire me to do a job of writing by the fifteenth of the month, you do not want me to show up on that day with a story describing how I could not do what I was paid for. You want the writing, and you want it first class, all wool and a yard wide. This is cold, cruel, heartless talk. It is-to all second-raters and shirk ers. But to real men it is a joy and gladness. They rejoice to make good themselves; they expect others to make good, and they like to hear preached the gospel of making good. A city librarian, in his report some time ago, spoke of the parable of the talents, in which we are told of the three servants who had received talents, five, two and one, respectively. On the Master's return they all dered account of their steward. ship. The first two had doubled their capital. Each of them said so in fourteen words, and their work was pronounced, 'Well done, good and faithful servant.' Servant no ber three had accomplished absolutely nothing, but he made a full report in forty-two words, three times as long as the other reports." There you have it. The less you do the more you explain.

Learn that word by heart. Get to saying it in your sleep.
Of all the joys on this terrestrial sphere there is none quite so soul-satisfying and one hundred percentish as making good. Do your work a little better than any one else could do it. That is the margin of success.

Make good needs no foot notes. Failure requires forty two words.

-Frank Crane.

CHARACTER

The building up of a good character may be counted real success. Our young men should strive for success but it should be the genuine article and not the sham that the world is apt to label "Success." Better be termed unsuccessful, or even a failure than to subscribe to some of the popular If success and character can not both be attained, hold on to character and though the world may deride you, you will bold a precious sion that will be more to you han all ephemeral glories that you might gain through doubtful means. But to strive for success, even as the world knows it, may be permissible, if carried on under proper restric

KNOWLEDGE IS POWER

A man who could read, write and speak ten different languages was Jersey for begging. When brought before a magistrate on a charge of vagrancy his defense was that he could find nothing to do, and he said it was very strange that economic conditions were such that an edueated man like himself could not earn a living.

Now, the chances are that although this man was proficient in ten lan guages he was not really educated that is, not trained in a practical It he had been practically educated he could certainly have earne

Knowing a lot of things is not edu eation. Merely learning more and more facts, piling up knowledge, making the brain a great cluttered memory chamber, doesn't necessarily make one an educated man or woman Real education is power-power to influence and develop character and power to effect action and make the possessor of use in the world to his fellow men.—Catholic Columbian.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

THE GUARDIAN ANGEL

A TRUE STORY

Truth is stranger than fiction spiritual, the supernatural, this generation-ever seeking strange things, strange gods—passes it by, as it does the lovely legends and old fairy tales that used to bring truth to men's minds when the world was In these our days, our won-and the daily newspapers have taken their place. A thoughtless public that doubts the word of God and facts in the lives of His saints readily accepts any inventions the daily journals print; and has, unhappily, grown so familiar with coarse details of every sort of crime, that things delicate and ethereal seem strange, unreal. The material has crushed the spiritual, though it is the only enduring reality; the sensational has slain the sense of the supernatur-

Well, this is not a newspaper story although it was published in France, when the event happened there. It is only a poor attempt to show, by an actual occurrence, how well God's angels guard the creatures He has given into their charge. The great forest was shadowy with the twilight of centuries; and, like all things on which age lays his heavy hand, the forest was still. It was one of the old forests of the Old World : full of science, of secrets, of allurement, of fear, but also full of seace. The great trunks of the wal nut trees were grey ; the moss covering their mighty roots was ancient. Majestic was the forest terrible in its hidden strength. Even the auda cious summer breezes grew timid when they found themselves within its still borders, and scarcely stirred. Like some impregnable fortress, for untold generations, it had withstood the attacks of time. The steady siege of everchanging seasons, the derce assaults of sudden storms, the tempests that broke upon it, raged and rolled away and left it as before.

In the open country, near the edge of the forest, stood a large comfort-able house. Everything about it bore the impress of good manage-ment and ample means. The broad fields were well cultivated, the orchards flourishing, the vineyards fruitful, the barns full. The children were so tenderly cared for, so lovingly protected, they did not know any thing of evil or sadness, and their parents were blessed in them.

When the youngest child was in his third year, an unexpected blow shattered the happiness of the homestead, with the appalling suddenness a thunderbolt from a clear sky. The day that was to end darkly in grief began brightly, and as she had done on many other days, the nurse took the children to the edge of the forest to play. There, in its cool hade, they found a variety of amuse ment, while she sewed or knitted un disturbed. When the hour came for returning home, and she called her charges, Paul, the baby, who was always the first to come to her running and laughing, neither came nor answered; so, she supposed he was asleep behind one of the giant oaks. When she did not find him she grew anxious, and made the other children join in her hunt for him. shouts and cries they looked behind the great trees, among their mighty roots, in their hollow places, under the bushes, anywhere the little one could have hidden. But nowhere could they find their baby brother. When they realized it, the tired children clung to the nurse solbing and begging to go home. Dusk was creeping into the forest with stealthy swiftness bringing deeper mystery and awe; and the distracted girl, dazed and unstrung, gave up her vain search and took her frightened, hungry charges to the louse. As soon as she had told her tale, the father, with men and lanterns, was ready to follow her to find his little son ; knowing full weil the quest would be no easy one, even though a child of three years could numberless not wander far. For arrested recently in a town in New paths traversed the ancient forest, and expert indeed that woodsman be who could find his way among them. The search party lit a fire, where the children had played that afternoon, and began with order and thoroughness to look for the lost baby. And his mother prayed. All night long they searched in vain ; all night long she prayed. Even if death had not taken her loveliest and best loved child, it was agony to think of him cold and hungry and in terror, out there alone in the cruel black forest. And from her tortured heart, she begged God, who had given His angels charge over the hildren of men, to remember her helpless baby. For two anxious days, and through the long dark hours of three weary nights, they sought for the lost one; out neither the mother's untiring love, nor the father's resolute will nor the patient, persevering devotion of friends and servants availed. They knew now, without doubt, that he was dead, and their best hope was to rescue his little body. For a ghastly, unspoken fear stalked beside them through the shadows. Late in the afternoon of the third day, the strange thing happened. Some of the sad searchers, with the griefstricken mother, were wearily mak-ing their way through the gloom and silence of the forest when, suddenly, they stopped, amazed and awed. There, before their incredulous eyes, between the great roots of a mighty oak, on a bed of deep soft moss, lay little Paul, not pinched and white and stiff in death, as their last for-

ing, but means happiness eternal for

he soul or misery everlasting.

Paganism there is in plenty about the ordinary Protestant funeral, where there are words of sweetness to the living but not a prayer for the dead. And how that pagan notion of the country quoted day after day the last words of the late Mr. Frohman: "Why fear death? It is the most beautiful adventure in life.' stoic could say that: not the man who realizes his sinfulness and who nows what awful possibilities death has in its keeping.

It is all very well to protest against the use of pagan symbols at funerals out it is not the symbols that are to be blamed; it is the false theology o which this paganism is the expression. - Boston Pilot.

RELIGION IN FRENCH ARMY

EATS LYEDIAN

THE BEST DISIN-

FECTANT KNOWN.

USED FOR MAKING

HARD AND SOFT

SOAP. FOR SOFTEN-

ING WATER AND FOR

OVER 500 OTHER

REFUSE SUBSTITUTES

E.W.GILLETT CO.LTD.

straight body as plump, his laugh as merry as if he had not been out of his father's house. They asked him if he was not hungry, but he said "No." They asked if he had not been frightened, but he said, "No." They asked why he was not hungry, had he had food, and he said "Yes." The asked him if he had not been cold and atraid to be alone in the dark forest. He said: "It was not cold; it was not dark; I was not alone."

His mother asked: "Who was fed you, and took care of you, and

And the child answered:

played with you?"

white and shining!"

with you? Who kept you warm and big beautiful lady with wings. A kind lady-like my mamma-but big

—oh, so big! And all white and shining, with great big wings, nice, soft, warm wings! Such a beautiful lady, with such beautiful wings, all

The mother knew that God had

Guardian Angel.-V. B.

heard her prayers and her baby had

FUNERAL PAGANISM

A writer in The Churchman (Episcopalian) finds fault with the pagan.

ism of the modern funeral. "The modern conventional idea of death," trenched itself in our Christian civil ization, permeated Christian ideas, crept into our customs, manners

what we often label Christian is nothing but a macquerade of pagan.

the broken column, the broken wheel

the inverted torch, the empty vase

Wallis, in American Messenger.

MONTREAL

TORONTO . ONT.

PURPOSES.

WINNIPEG

Cardinal Amette, Archbishop of Paris, has made a statement of the facilities afforded to the soldiers of France for their religious duties and the manner in which they avail themselves of these facilities. Each army division has its official chaplain, assisted by many temporary chap

Holy Mass is calebrated wherever there are priests, officially acting in their sacerdotal capacity, or soldiers in the rank and file, combatants, stretcher bearers and infirmarians, so that in the trenches themselves and in the open air the Holy Sacrifice is always going up. The soldiers wear the badge of the Sacred Heart and the miraculous medal of Our Lady, and they join the liturgical chants or recite the rosary in comion. In every hospital there is a chapel where the soldiers can attend, and throughout the army there has been a wonderful religious awaken

As the doctrine of the Real Presence of our Divine Lord in the Eucharist he says, is saturated with Pagan-ism and mixed with non-Chris-tian ingredients. This has so insymbols and habits of thought, that ism, has continued in our midst and perpetuated in our cemeteries the an symbols of death—the scythe, the hourglass-all non Christian in every sense. You can walk to day in the pagan catacombs of Rome or along the roads that enter Rome or Athens, and behold on the funeral tablets and monuments which mark the graves of an age that knew not Christ precisely these same symbols of death. Have we advanced no further in our conception of death than that of Socrates and Seneca?" One will note that there is some exaggeration in this writer's statement of the case. The use of such symbols, which may be called classic, do not quite express the sentiment of our Christian people in regard to death. They hardly avert to the meaning of e pagan symbols of death. The Catholic at any rate has not allowed paganism to color his views of death. One needs only to know the Requiem lass, the continual insistence of the Church that prayers should be said for the faithful departed to see that death does not signify a mere sleep-

Actress Tells Secret

Well Known Actress Tells How She Darkened Her Gray Hair and Promoted Its Growth With a Simple Home Made Mixture

Miss Blanche Rose, a well-known actress, who darkened her gray hair with a simple preparation which she mixed a home, in a recent interview at Chicago, derful, unwise days little is believed of anything outside the limitation of the senses. But truth is not confined within such narrow bounds, nor imprisoned in material things. She dwells, unfettered, in the limitless space of the infinite and immortal; and because truth is free, and soars above and beyond the visible and tangible, and cannot be driven into the slavery of making money, she, the beautiful is derided and neglected.

So the Holy Scriptures have been east aside with the old fairy tales; criminal, on the Cross. God, Who son blue with tobacco smoke. The is infinitely great, does not demean clock on the mantiepiece struck the or degrade Himself, as earthly sovereigns might do, by such an act. He is great and high, but He is also, as we should say in speaking of a man, humble and simple, and without the death has spread we say a short time pride of human greatness. And He ago, when all the sentimentalists of does not think it beneath Him to come down to the simple notions, and capacities and wants of the crea tures whom He has made and loves so much. To give Himself to us as our food is of a piece with the other things He has done for us. It is a miracle that tries the faith of irreligious men, but it is the inward support and consolation of the servants of

CONVERTS NOT DISAPPOINTED

BUT FIND PRACE OF SOUL IN

THE CATHOLIC CHURCH

We are so used to being told that converts to the Catholic Faith are very scon disappointed with their new surroundings, that we are not surprised to hear the old story being repeated in the Anglican references to the death of Father Maturin. He s spoken of as a restless spirit who found no peace, not even in that Church which he entered at so great cost. To this criticism of his life which has been continuously made for the past twenty years, his own book, "The Price of Unity," ought to be a sufficient reply. But many people will never read it, and even those who do so will be ready to misinterpret the kind spirit in which it was written, writes E. H, in The

It is only natural that those wh never ceased to love and respect him, should try to find some way of explaining why they themselves could not take the step that he had taken. It is practically imperative that they should insist that all converts to the Roman Church are misguided, and that if they are honest

they will realize that they have made verte, just as we try to classify those

are. For each class there will be they think and act.

who decide to remain where they different explanation to account for

SILENCE AND ASSERTIVENESS

If a convert refuses to speak of the feelings of his heart, if he silently

adjusts his life to his new surround ings and relies upon prayer and ex

others to the faith, then it will be said that he is unhappy, that he realized his mistake, that he is disap-pointed and disillusioned, that he is still searching for the truth, doubtful whether it is his duty to retrace

his steps, or else to seek some ideal esoteric interpretation of Catholicism

which will supply the necessities of his soul, while he outwardly conforms

If, on the other hand, he becomes an active propagandist, then, since it is certain that his innermost feelings

really belie the boldness of his words, ne must be regarded as lacking in charity—as one who finds at least some comfort in endeavoring to drag others into the difficulties into which

This way of reasoning is perfectly natural, and it is, in a measure, a sign of good faith in those who make use of it. But is it true? Is silence

a sign of regret? Is assertiveness a

Surely the exaggeration is evident.

ligion that he once believed to be true must suffer; but his suffering is no evidence that he has made a misstep. If he has exchanged the less for the greater good—nay the great-est good; then the new birth will mean, that there will be a strange mingling of pain and joy—of regrets and consolations. Different temperaments will manifest their feelings in different ways. One will shout mans of victory; another will bow

his head and say "Domine non sum

dignus;" and both will be honest

FATHER MATURIN IN LONDON

The writer well remembers meeting Father Maturin in London in the summer of 1909. He was the bearer of a letter from an old friend, who

in Philadelphia when St. Clement'

Church was the centre of ecclesiasti breakfast; and on reading the missive, at once sent for the bearer, who was ushered into the study. The warmth of the reception was a sur-prise, for so much had been said by

Anglicans about the disappointment that his conversion had brought that the writer expected to see an aged and broken man. Instead of this, one full of vigor and soldierly bearing was discovered, upon whose face and figure the ravages of time had left few marks. He looked almost the same as he had years before when he was seen in the pulpit

of the Anglican Church where his

"I am so glad to meet you because you have come from one of my oldest friends, but, especially, because you come from dear Philadelphis. You will be able to tell me a great deal bout those I know there.

in that chair and talk as fast as you

DELIGHTFUL CHAT WITH PIPES

The writer was forced into an arm caller used to worship.

can about everyone.

The priest had just finished his belonged to the Catholic movement to the conventional orthodoxy.

he has placed himself.

sign of dishonesty?

and true men.

cal attraction.

Every

mple as the only means of leading the way in which it is supposed that

God .- Sacred Heart Review. HAPPY IN NEW FAITH

ing .- Church Progress.

THE HOLY EUCHARIST

PROOFS OF THE DOCTRINE

is a difficult one, there have been many who have at different times opposed and impugned it. Our reason for believing it is because the Church. which cannot err in her teaching. declares its truth. But it may be of some use to consider the proofs of it that are given in Holy Scripture. When our Lord was on earth He worked two or three miracles which were of the same character with this that is done in the Holy Eucharist. His first miracle was the changing of the water into wine at the marriage feast of Cana. On more than one occasion He fed great multitudes of people by multipling loaves of bread and fishes. And after working the first of these miracles. He discoursed to His disciples on "the food which the Son of Man will give you." Upon this some of them asked Him for a sign, i. e. a miracle from heaven, that they might see and believe in Him. What dost thou work? Our father did eat manna in the desert, as it is written. He gave them bread from leaven to eat." Our Lord answered them "Moses gave you not brea from heaven but my Father giveth you the true bread from heaven; for the bread of God is that which cometh down from heaven, and giveth life to "I am the Bread of Life Your fathers did eat manna in the desert, and they died. This is the Bread descending down from heaven. that if any one eat of it he may not die. I am the Living Bread that came down from beaven. If any man eat of this Bread, he shall live for ever, and the bread that I will give is My Flesh for the life of the world."
The Jews did not understand Him to be speaking in any mystical or figurative sense, for they said among them selves, "How can this man give us His flesh to eat?" But our Lord instead of explaining the words and showing (as the Jews thought he should) that they were to be taken literally, reasserted them. "Amen amen, I say to you, unless you eat the flesh of the Son of Man and drink His Blood, you shall not have life in you." We have, then, very clear proof of this dectrine. (1) Because our Lord prepared His disciples beforehand by miracles of a similar kind, and because He himself led His disciples from the consideration of one of these miracles to the greater miracle of "the bread from heaven which the Father giveth you." (2) Oar Lord referred to the manna as a type of the true bread from heaven. (3) He asserted repeatedly to His disciples and the Jews that the bread that He would give for the life of the world was His Flesh. (4) Before a year had passed He solemnly instituted the Holy Eucharist, blessing bread and saying, "This is My Body," and telling His Apostles at the same time to continue to do what He was then doing, in commemoration of Him. St. Cyril, Bishop of Jerusalem in the fourth century, says: "As Christ Himself declared and said: 'This is My Body,' who would dare to doubt it? As He openly protested, saying, 'This is My Blood,' who would hesitate and say that it is not His

What is hardest to believe in this doctrine is not that God, Who is Al-mighty, to Whom nothing is im possible or difficult, should change one thing into another, but that the Lord of all glory is under the appearance of corporal food. But it is not more wonderful than that He should be born as a helpless infant at Bethlehem; that He should in obscurity for nearly thirty years at Nazareth; and that He should humble Himself for nearly thirty years at Nazareth; chair and supplied with an orthodox and that He should humble Himself English "briar." Father Maturin to die, under the appearance of a filled his pipe also, and the air was quarter hours in a seeming continuous succession, as everything was related about the old friends in the Anglican ministry with whom Father Maturin was once associated. He terpolating a pointed question, and all the time looking straight ahead of him, with most intense interest. At last the subject was exhausted. The priest laid his pipe on the table "Tell me what these men think of ne now. Tell me the honest truth.'

"They think that you are very much disappointed with your change of faith. Those who have seen you say that you have altered very much in every way-and altered for the

"I knew it-I have been told this Look at me. Do I look like a dis-

His face was rippling with smiles. o one could look into those honest fearless eyes and believe that his conviction was stamped on every face of a soldier who was willing to loved. He broke the silence.

"Why do they say these things? am so glad when they come to see me that I never suspect that they will misunderstand my motives. When you go back to America them that what is being said is ab solutely untrue.

NGLICAN CHURCH IN UNITED STATES He then fell to talking of St. Clement's and the many old friends there He spoke of his despair for the Anglian Church in the United States. "I have always had very strong doubts about the position of the Pro testant Episcopal Church. Things were tolerable in England, where there was a semblance of a tradi-tional status, but in America the situation was extraordinary to say the least. What possible justification could there be for building up an Angio-Catholic Church there American Episcopalianism was a sore a great mistake. An attempt will also be made to classify these contrial to me at all times. I never could reconcile myself to it."

It was characteristic of Father Maturin that he disliked to speak of himself. He made no attempt what ever to defend anything he had ever done. He was a Catholic. That was enough. No one can be a Catholic without the conviction that the faith needs no justification. He asked the writer to look in his face and that was sufficient.—Boston Pilot.

EAST PRUSSIA GETS AID FROM VATICAN

The Holy Father in his capacity as benefactor of all the afflicted, sent through the Papal Nuncio at Munich a sum of 10,000 marks to the Bishop of Frauenberg, to be distrib-uted for the relief of the sufferers in East Prussia. The Papal Secretary of State in sending the amount says:

The Sovereign Pontiff sincerely de plores the sad position of the popu-lation of the Baltic Provinces, but learns with pleasure the generous response of Catholics throughout the empire to this pressing need, and is pleased to send out of his poverty a ontribution as a mark of his father ly love and care. -- Buffalo Echo.

Don't Use Dangerous Antiseptic Tablets

It is an unnecessary rick. Use the safe antiseptic and germicide, Absorbine, Jr.,—it kills germs quickly and surely without any possibility of harmful results made of pure herbs, non-poisonous, and there is no danger whatever if the children get hold of the bottle. It retains its germicidal powers even when diluted one part of Absorbine, Jr., to 100 parts water—and its antiseptic rowers one part — and its antiseptic powers one part Absorbine, Jr, to 200 parts water. The germicidal properties of Absorbine, Jr., have been tested and proven both in Jr., have been tested and proven both in laboratory and actual practice. Detailed laboratory reports mailed upon request. Absorbine, Jr., $1.00 and $2.00 per bottle at druggists or postpaid. A liberal trial bottle postpaid for 10c, in stamps. W. F. Young, P. D. F., 299 Lymans Bldg., Montreal, Can.

DRUNKENNESS CAN BE CURED

It is a disease—not a habit

"Some years ago I was a heavy drinker.
Demon drink had me in his grip.
Friends, business, family, were slipping from me. Ruin stared me in the face.
But one friend remained, a physician.
Through his effects.

I WAS SAVED

This man had made a scientific study of drunkenness as a disease. He had found a cure for it."

It was a case like this that made me realize how many others were in need of aid, and determined me, if possible, to offer Samaria Prescription to the world. The treatment is absolutely different from others: It can be given without the patient's knowledge if desired. Thousands of wives, mothers, daughters and sisters have saved their men-folk from the curse of alcohol through it.

IT CURES In a few days, all craving for alcohol is gone, and the patient is restored to health, happiness, family and friends, and the respect of all.

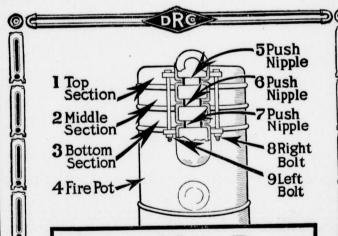

I am ready to tell you about it, abso-

FREE-SEND NO MONEY

Just send me your name and address, saying: "Please tell me how I can cure drunkenness," that is all you need to say. drunkenness," that is all you need to say. I will understand and will write you at once telling you all about my wonderful cure for DRUNKENNESS, and will also send you a TRIAL PACKAGE, which will show you how the treatment can be given without the patient's knowledge. All this I will send you ABSOLUTELY FREE in a plain, sealed package, at once. Do not delay; send me a post card, or write me a letter to-day. Do not be afraid to send in your name. I always treat correspondence as sacredly confidential.

E.R. Herd, Samaria Remedy Co.

E. R. Herd, Samaria Remedy Co. 421 Mutual Street Toronto, Canada

Only 9 Main Parts Above the Base

DON'T buy a boiler with a lot of parts. The more parts, the more chances of it getting out of order; the more repairs to pay for.

The Safford boiler has NINE (count them in the sketch) main parts above the base. Ordinary boilers have nineteen main parts. Ordinary boilers thus have 111% more parts, and are that much more likely to get out of order. On the Safford there is not even a rubber gasket to wear out. If it had rubber gaskets, a rubber gasket to wear out. If it had rubber gaskets, they would have to be replaced every year or two. And if the rubber gaskets were not replaced accurately (and this is most difficult to do) the circulation of the water would be impeded, and more coal consumed to propel the same amount of heat to the rooms. But the absence of rubber gaskets and the few parts in the Safford boiler ensure a wonderfully rapid circulation of water through it. And this rapid circulation of water through it. And this rapid circulation of water is one of the causes of the Safford's economy of fuel, fully one-third less coal being required.

Safford Boilers and Radiators

are in every way superior to ordinary heating systems. The Safford, you see, is a specialized hot water system—the product of an organization with 30 years' experience. Our booklet, "Home Heating," gives facts you should know. It will only take you a minute or two to write a post-card-request for it.

Branches:
Vancouver
Winnipeg
Calgary

Vancouver
TORONTO, CANADA

18