There's Joy in Heaven.

There's joy in every joyful heart,
In children's voices:
When morn'g sun glows in its sunny beam,
In bright gladness given,
In lowly gladness, too,
In love that throbs and warms,
In hearts whose path is true,
In every step through life,
In hearts whose path is true,
That find a path to heaven,
But with the best in heaven.

There's joy in humble hearts who claim,
In lowly gladness,
In hearts whose path is true,
In every step through life,
In hearts whose path is true,
That find a path to heaven,
But with the best in heaven.

Agriculture.

"That is my Home."

Many a farmer manages in such a way that neither his sons nor his daughters can take any pleasure in directing the eye of a stranger to the family dwelling, and saying, "That is my home."

It is not in the erection of costly and temple-like houses, or ornamenting other buildings with much profuse expense, that the farmer should make his home beautiful. These costly decorations may appear very splendid at first, but they are of that character which loses beauty instead of increasing it. The mind of youth is reaching forward, and is most pleased with that kind of ornament which every day grows more beautiful.

Most men, in building houses, expend much money in making the house showy. Ours, two or five hundred dollars spent in this way is a common item in building. But this is all just "paying too much for the whistle." Such beauty only pleases while it is new. The second look at it has no interest. The eye ceases to behold with pleasure whatever, from its fixed character, become familiar and established. Simplicity, order, and neatness, constitute the sum of all beauty, in everything which is of a fixed character.

Miscellaneous.

Wonderful Trees.

Among the remarkable trees in the world, the following, of which we have compiled brief descriptions, are some of the most curious.

THE GREAT CHESTNUT TREE.

On the one side of Mount Etna there is a famous chestnut tree, which is said to be one hundred and ninety-six feet in circumference, just above the surface of the ground. Its numerous trunk is separated into five divisions, which gives it the appearance of several trees growing together. In a circular space formed by these large branches, a hut has been erected for the accommodation of those who collect the chestnuts.

THE IRONY-TREE.

The irony-tree is popularly called the Tegu plant, and is common in South America. The tree is one of the numerous family of palms, but belonging to the order designated as screw pine tribe. The natives use their leaves to cover their cottages, and from the nuts make buttons and various other articles.

During the season of their falling, it is dangerous to enter the groves where they abound, as the force of their descent is sufficient to knock down the strongest man. The natives, however, provide themselves with wicker baskets, which they hold over their heads while collecting the fruit from the grove. In this manner they are perfectly secure from injury.

Tattling.

It is very common for persons to tell everything they hear, whether they have any grounds for the belief of what they hear or not. To the injury of an individual, something may be said and spread abroad, where there is not the least shadow of truth in it. It is against this species of tattling, which we particularly guard ourselves, that the wise man knew how prone the world was to this, when he said:—He that keeps his mouth keepeth his life. Truly that man who is careful of what he says—especially when he knows it is in his power to keep it—will find himself the better off for it. To the injury of a person, or to the praise of his purposes—acts up to the proverb, and gains the esteem and friendship of his fellows. Although by not saying sufficiently on your guard, you may excite a degree of interest at the expense of the character, which he knows it is in his power to keep his mouth, depend upon it, it is only for a moment. You but heap coals of fire on your own head. None will trust you with their secrets, and you will be pointed at as one deserting of their confidence. Beware how you use your tongue. As infirm to their confidence, you may, to think twice before we speak once. Act up to this, and now will complain of you in this respect—and you will gain the confidence of mankind, which is more to be desired than all the secrets of a commonwealth.

Humble Worth.

Tell me not that he's a poor man,
That his dress is coarse and bare;
Tell me not his daily pittance,
As infirm to their confidence;
Tell me not his humble birth,
That his parentage is low;
If he's honest in his actions,
That is all I want to know.

Singular Surgical Operation.

A young woman from Kentucky, near Maysville, came to this city some days since, for professional relief from a very remarkable deformity, which she had been born with, and which she had never improved in size. From one hand projected an enormous growth, apparently heterogeneous in its character, about the size of an adult foot, shaped somewhat like, but larger than a foot, and covered with a thin, transparent, fleshy, and watery skin, which she had broken off, on the end of which was a nail about twice as large as that of the great toe. This mass occupied the position, and seemed to substitute the middle and ring fingers and middle of the hand, with which she was and altogether disabling them; extending in the palm of the hand up to, and on the back of the hand nearly up to the wrist. From the other hand extended two similar tumors, reaching to the wrist, of five or six pounds weight, the little finger and thumb only being present, but useless in consequence of the encroachments of the growths. They constituted cumbersome masses, rendering the limbs entirely useless, except for the support of the body, and for the carriage of clothing to and from the washing tub, and for the performance of the operation, or of her having been out of her room.

Rules for the Journey of Life.

The following rules, from the papers of Dr. Watt, according to his memorandum, are thrown together as general maxims which would be of service to many.

Never ridicule sacred things, or what others esteem as such, however absurd they may appear to be.

Never to love shewy when people are professedly engaged in worship.

Never to resent a supposed injury, till I know the views and motives of the author of it. Not on any occasion to relate it to those who are near to me.

Not to dispute with me.

Never to court the favour of the rich by flattering either their vanities or their virtues.

To speak with calmness and deliberation on all occasions, especially in circumstances which lead to dispute.

Frequently to review my conduct and note my feelings.

Interesting Paragraphs.

A HAPPY ILLUSTRATION.—The Currier de Atias Unno, in an article on the calorific ship Ericsson, illustrates the operation of the water apparatus, in alternately heating and cooling the same volume of air, in the following apt manner:—The great fundamental principle of the transmission of calorific heat by the inventor twenty years of reflection to realize in this machine. It consists in using constantly the same heat to warm the air which is made to enter the cylinders. The apparatus by means of which this principle is applied, is called a regenerator, and we can form a clear idea of it by supposing a man has his mouth filled with a warm metallic sponge; if he draws in his breath, the exterior air, in traversing the pores of the warm sponge, will be warmed, and will arrive warm into the lungs; whilst the sponge having parted with its calorific, will have become cold; if he exhales the air thus warmed, this air, in again traversing the sponge, will again warm it, and will come out reduced in temperature. If instead of producing the movements by the contraction of the muscles of the breast of the individual, an ordinary bellows is adapted to the mouth to produce the inhalation and the exhalation, we will have Ericsson's machine.
