six o'clock last evening, as the mill hands at Hampton village were leaving work, smoke and flames were seen uing from a house owned and occupied by a Mrs. Todd. The fire apparatus was quickly set to work and the fire was soon extinguished. There was a strong odor of kerosene oil in one of the rooms and between the walls was found a garment partially consumed but reeking with the smell of oil. Suspicion naturally arose that the fire was of an incendiary character and some of the men undertook to keep watch out for further developments. During the evening there was sound of an ax inside the house, and shortly after a lounge was taken out on the street when it was found that fire had again broken out and the firemen had to go to work the second time to extinguish the blaze. There are other houses and buildings in close proximity to that in which the fire was found, and under less vigilant conditions it is quite possible that a disastrous conflagration would have resulted. It is said the family was about ready to go to St. John, where the husband and father is at present em ployed. There seems to be ample ground upon which to warrant an in-
