The Races-Jockeying With the Weather Jupiter Pluvius wore such a threat-

ning expression yesterday morning hat at 10 a.m. the management decided to call the meet on the exhibition track off. Old Sol, one hour later, well nigh penetrated the heavy hank of cloud which spread from over Lake Erie, and the score cards were locked up and run. At 12.30 the races were reported on; but another big sprinkler passed over town at one o'clock, and in ten minutes the play was up. The management did all possible by phone to advise patronage and yet many were up at the track. There was some exhibition going, too, or the track dried pretty well out efore five o'clock. The card showed eight entries for the 2.50 class, 6 for the 2.20, and ive for the 2.10. Most of the horses will remain in town, as arrangements are being made to hold the event next week, and the horsemen say Simcoe is a good town to put up in. The New Boughner Picnic.

With 1917 the Boughner picnic begins life anew. Yesterday the weather in itself was against the event. Then while Dover offers general ad-Them while Dover offers general advantages for an outing it lacks central location. There are divided attractions at Dover, a run on the boat, a dip in the lake, the hobbies or an hour with the fishermen, but all these attractions tend to scatter the crowd and defeat the first object of a family picnic viz social intercourse, the making of new acquaintances and the hour with old friends. Mat Boughner of Waterford the leader of the minority on the old organization has always wanted the picnic at Dover. He has had his way, and he put up a big effort to insure it's success. The a big effort to insure it's success. The Villa Nova brass band was engaged south-east of Dossofait. More than for the day and was much appreciated, but business men in Dover affirmed that the weather had made the Boughner picnic the poorest in the history of Boughner picnics.

Defeating the Aim There is evidence that the conven-tionalities and formalities of society, which aforetime many went into camps or cottage to escape for a season, are making their inroads upon the summer folk, and that long the boom of a month's life "ad libitum" in a sumer cottage will have lost its chief "raison d'etre."
