Defective Archie Skirving of the Pere Marquette reports that there are some fine fields of tobacco on the farms of the Walker Sons near Walkerville. Some of it is 4 feet high and ready to cut now. There will be no danger of the tobacco being nipped by the frost this year.

Mrs. Crosby who has laid an information against her son-in-law William Curtis for assault did not make her appearance at the Police Court this morning so the trial could not go on. There was several witnesses present who claimed that Mrs. Crosby started the fight. It is thought that Mrs. Crosby heard of the evidence which would be given against her so signified her intention of dropping the case by staying away from court. This is the case which rose out of the colored dance in the Curling rink a short time ago.

CLEVER CAPTURE OF BURGLAR

When the train arrived at the station the man was taken to the police station. Here the authorities immediately recognized him as a character they had arrested last December on the charge of carrying a loaded revolver, and who then gave the name of Thomas Edwards. He was arraigned on the charge of vagrancy and remanded for a week to hunt up his past history. Rex, the trainman who was held up Sunday night, could not positively identify him as the man who attempted to hold him up Sunday night. Rex was returning from the city about midnight and at the G. T. R. and P. M. junction he was accosted by a man of much the same build as Hess, who brandished a club. Having no protection Rex retreated to the station house. The man gave chase but, seeing that Rex had discovered a poker, he slammed the door and disappeared.

From what has since been learned it appears that Hess was, at the time, accompanied by another man and the woman before mentioned. They slept on the floor of the Richardson street car all night, and, continuing their journey this morning, threw the club with which they had attempted the hold-up, into the ditch.

Aware that the other man and the woman were still missing, Detective Skirving procured the assistance of Officer James McGregor. Together the two beat the thickets along the P. M. track between Richardson and Fargo with no success. At last, when about to give up, a momentary glimpse was caught of a head sticking up in a cornfield. The head proved to be attached to the body of the other man who was wanted with him was the woman.

They were immediately brought to Chatham, where they gave the names of Walter Orchard and Rosie Bay Orchard is a broncho buster and is a native of Colorado. The female member of the gang proves to be merely a girl of seventeen, who ran away from her home in St. Thomas last spring. She appears to have no compunction whatever for the life she has been leading, for when told she might get a long imprisonment she merely replied, "I don't care." They were members of the gang which has been troubling the police lately and that they were cornered in the hold-up of Sunday evening.

For a week or more the gang spoken of, consisting of six men and two women, have had their camp in the thickets near the C. P. R. bridge at Pikeville. P. C. Dezelia and Dodson and Constable Carter visited the spot yesterday. Needless to say, they found no one at home, the roustabouts having been warned by the sentries. A large quantity of tobacco paper was found and a piece of paper such as butchers use, which had been wrapped around meat which had come, probably, from the butcher shop of T. Hallinan, looted last week.

A hollow log, inverted with the hollow side to the ground, shielded the remainder of their groceries and utensils. Recent camp fires were also discovered.

There is no doubt that this is the same gang who looted the store of A. J. Wilson and Hallinan's butcher shop over the river. Hess is a particularly ill-favored and awkward looking individual, with the appearance of being very muscular, and the others are far from being edifying to look upon.

Orchard admitted he was an expert shot. The authorities are confident they have cleaned out the gang.

A sidelight was thrown on the veritable class of people when Judge Houston asked Hess in Police Court this morning, the charge upon which he had been arrested here previously, "For carryin' a gatlin', yer honor," replied the prisoner. The other two will appear in court tomorrow morning.

PEDLAR IS MURDERED.

Slashed Over Head With Knife — Had Money With Him

Ottawa, Aug. 25.—George Solomon, an Assyrian pedlar of Ottawa, was brutally murdered on Friday in the Township of Aldfield, County of Pontec, 20 miles from Shawville.

He was brutally slashed about the head with a knife and left for dead. He managed to crawl to a house some distance away, where he died. He said he was robbed, and a disreputable character of the neighborhood is suspected. The man's friends in Ottawa say he had considerable money on his person.

The authorities are looking for a Frenchman named Laderoute, who is suspected of the crime.

THE DUMMER TRAGEDY

Charles Gow Surrenders, Admitting He Shot Hill Boy.

Coroner's Jury Brings In Verdict That the Shooting Was Accidental and Exonerates Gow From Blame—Crown Attorney Says Gow Was Criminally Careless and May Be Indicted For Manslaughter — Consulting Attorney-General.

Norwood, Aug. 28.—The announcement Saturday morning by Charles Gow, a farmer living near by, that he had killed little Tommy Hill, made a speedy end to the mystery that enveloped the Dummer Township tragedy, but has given rise to another legal problem. The confession was made to Constable Moore in Warsaw early in the morning. Shortly after noon the coroner's jury started taking evidence, and in a few minutes decided that the shooting was accidental. Further than that, they exonerated Gow. The warrants prepared for the latter was discarded and he was allowed to go his way.

Crown Attorney Wood is unprepared to say what would be done further until he has conferred with the Attorney-General.

Gow's Story of Shooting.

Here is the story of the shooting as Gow told it to the jury on Saturday morning:

"I am a farmer, and I live in Warsaw. I am captain of the Warsaw rifle team and am at present due at the rifle matches being held in Ottawa. The Dewart boys had borrowed my army rifle and I needed it. On my way home from an evening at their house I took my gun and carried it in the buggy. We heard the lads ahead well as they carried a gun all my way. I pulled up the rocky lane in front of the Hill house; I think there was a shot from the verandah. I would not swear to it, because the buggy was making a terrible racket over the stones.

"The horse was running, and when we passed out of the line of fire I pulled the trigger of my gun. The weapon lay across my knee, diagonally, with the muzzle in the crook of elbow.

"It is a second nature for me to shoot, for I have practiced long distance and rapid firing for years. I pumped up the cartridges and discharged the gun three or four times at random, simply as a bluff.

"The others who were with Gow were Ed. Dewart in the buggy, and, walking ahead, George Gallagher, aged 12; Willie Murphy, aged 17, and Stewart Murphy, aged 26.

The Inquest.

Coroner Gray convened his inquest on Saturday morning and first heard the story of the Hill.

The father, sworn, told what had already been published. That he and his family were fast asleep when they were awakened by the light of the noise of cheering up the road. The people approached he could hear the words: "A mob! A mob!" He ran to the door and there came a rifle shot that barely missed him, then two more shots. Presently his little daughter, Mabel, ran downstairs with blood streaming from her hand, screaming that Tommy was shot. He turned and went upstairs and carried down the body of his boy. The rifle was fired from inside his orchard fence, some distance down the road.

His eldest son, Willie, told much the same story, and the second son, Robert, followed, corroborating the tale. Little Mabel told of the death of her brother as the two stood at the window.

For the Defence.

The testimony of the other party commenced with the story of little George Gallagher. The boy's story was straightforward and accurate. He and the two Murphys had walked some distance from the buggy containing Ed. Dewart and Charlie Gow. Arriving in front of the house, they had cheered, a salute that appears to have become a tradition upon passing the Hill home.

Instead, and the boys, turning, looking at the first knoll to look, he saw a blaze from the verandah and heard a report.

The Crown officers interrupted the evidence enough to test his ability to see from that point. "The fact that it was the only place where he could see made his statement conclusive. He and his companions ran to get out of harm's way, and there was the noise of firing, whence he could not say.

The Murphy boys told the same story. Charlie Gow then made his statement, and Ed. Dewart supported him.

Coroner's Brief Charge.

Coroner Gray made no lengthy address. All he said was:

"You have heard the evidence on both sides. You know the people and I leave the matter to you."

In 15 minutes the jury had returned with a verdict. It was an accidental shooting, they said, and they exonerated Charles Gow from blame in connection therewith.

Crown Attorney's Position.

Crown Attorney Wood was interviewed.

"I cannot say what will be the next step. As to that I shall confer with the Attorney-General's Department. Gow was criminally careless and may be indicted for manslaughter, but I do not think there is a jury in the land which will convict him. The vicinity has a great deal to do with such things, and what is negligence with firearms in another place is considered a small thing in Dummer."

NOVEL BALANCING

Features with the Norris & Rowe Greater Circus.

Norris & Rowe have provided so many high class novelties in bewildering display that it is impossible to pick out any particular one among the hundred acts offered, but for daring and skill, the McDonald Bros. have originated some startling new feats upon bicycles, unicycles, high wheel, etc., that seem to defy the laws of gravitation. The climax of their act comes when they place a ladder of enormous length, that reaches from the ground to the top of the tent. Mounting one wheel, the intrepid performers dash head long down the steep declivity at the imminent risk of their lives. However, they accomplish the feat successfully and it is but one of the many difficult acts they perform.

Another startling number is the suspended ladder. At the very apex of the huge tent, John Lanotte places a ladder across a flying trapeze. Adjusting the balance nicely, Lanotte goes through difficult evolutions that for daring, grace and skill has never been equaled. It is a new act and as yet has never been attempted by any other performer.

Hugh La Nole is another ladder expert. He performs upon what he terms a dancing or unsupported ladder. Placing it upright without any support whatever, he goes up step by step until he reaches the top and then carefully picks his way down the other side, the ladder all the time dancing to the accompaniment of the music and absolutely without support of any kind. These are but a few of the many novelties

Norris & Rowe have prepared for their patrons when the Norris & Rowe greater circus exhibits at Chatham, Wednesday, Aug. 30th.
