List of Canadian Vessels Sunk

BY HUN-SUBS.

The Canadian Fisherman in its July issue advocates making the German pay for the Canadian vessels that were sunk off our coasts last year through illegal warfare. The following are the names of the vessels, as well as details of their destruction as it appears in the magazine:

Triumph, steam trawler, 239 tons, owned by National Fish Co., Halifax. Captured by German submarine on Middle Bank, August 20th, 1918, and converted into a raider. After sinking several vessels, she was afterwards destroyed.

C. M. Walters, fishing schooner, 84 tons, owned by Zwicker & Co., Ltd., Lunenburg, N.S. Sunk by submarine on St. Pierre Bank, August 25th, 1918.

E. B. Walters, fishing schooner, 98 tons, owned by Zwicker & Co., Ltd., Lunenburg, N.S. Sunk by a submarine on St. Pierre Bank, August 25th, 1918.

Elsie Porter, fishing schooner, 91 tons, owned in Lunenburg, N.S. Sunk by submarine on Grand Bank, August 29th, 1918.

Gloaming, fishing schooner. Sunk by submarine while fishing on St. Pierre Bank, August 26th, 1918.

J. J. Flaherty, fishing schooner, 110 tons. Sunk by submarine on St. Pierre Bank, August 26th, 1918.

Lucille M. Schnare, fishing schooner, 93 tons, owned by W. C. Smith & Co., Lunenburg, N.S. Sunk by trawler Triumph on Quero Bank August 29th, 1918.

Nelson A., fishing schooner 27 tons, owned in Yarmouth, N.S. Sunk by submarine 25 miles south of Cape Roseway, N.S., August 4th, 1918.

Pasadena, fishing schooner, 91 tons, owned by Enos Wentzell, Mahone Bay, N.S. Sunk by submarine on Quero Bank, July, 1918.

Potentate, fishing schooner, 91 tons. Sunk by submarine on Banks, August 31st, 1918.

Una Saunders, fishing schooner, 95 tons, owned by Zwicker & Co., Lunenburg, N.S. Sunk by submarine on Middle Ground, August 20th, 1918.

Verna D. Adams, fishing schooner, 90 tons, owned by W. Duff, Lunenburg, N.S. Sunk by submarine on St. Pierre Bank, July, 1918.

In addition to the vessels named, several Canadian schooners in the fish carrying trade were sunk in other waters.

When Crooks Escape by Air.

Undoubtedly one of the problems which Scotland Yard will have to cope with in the near future will be the pursuit of criminals through the air.

Plans for the organization of a corps of aerial trackers, with a special Scotland Yard aerodrome from which detectives could make an immediate start in pursuit of wrongdoers who sought to escape the clutches of the law through the air, are already being carried out.

It may be some time before criminals include private aeroplanes among their equipment, but it will be comparatively easy matter for the well crackman and wealthy murderer to arrange for an escape by air.

Whether he will succeed depends on the aerial organization of Scotland Yard and the alertness of the customs and coastguards. Quick communication between the police and the latter may result in an easy capture.

As a member of the Criminal Investigation Department points out to the writer, although the air is wide the flying criminal has got to come down somewhere, and by wireless his description and that of his machine can be flashed over the world in a few minutes.

One method of stoppage and detection will be through the medium of a series of sound-detecting instruments along the coast, linked up by telephones with each other, and also with corps of aerial police. The noise of the machine will be detected, and if it does not land for inspection as required by aerial navigation rules, it will be located and reported, and a strict watch will be kept at all points.

Control of flying machines is being so organized that every machine entering Britain, for instance, will have to land for inspection.

The watch will be so strict that the possibility of evading the cordon of guards will be very slight. Other countries, in accordance with the suggestions of the Aerial Advisory Commission of the British Peace Delegation, are adopting similar plans for the control of air traffic. The chances of the flying criminal escaping justice, therefore, are not of the rosiest.

Fortunes in Stamps.

Judging by the amounts realized at the recent sales of the stamp collections made by two Taysiders (writes W.B.B. in the "Dundee Advertiser"), stamp collecting would appear to be a profitable hobby.

How a sum like £2,500 or £1,667 (obtained for the collections of Mr. A. G. Kidd, Dundee, and the late Mr. D. Dickson, Newport, respectively) could be amassed out of the collection of postage stamps must be a source of curiosity to most people.

Yet, while these particular sums were realized for collections which were probably amassed in the course of many years and with great pains, there are single specimens of stamps which, if they were auctioned, neither of these very comfortable amounts would purchase.

M. de la Renetiere, a Paris collector, possesses the only specimen known to exist of what is reckoned to be the rarest stamp in the world—namely, the one-cent (1856) of British Guiana. It is claimed that this stamp would not change hands now for £2,000.

One wonders how this tiny affair is guarded, and how many attempts have been made to extract it from its resting place.

A close second to this is the famous twopenny "Post Office" Mauritius. A glaring mistake was made in the engraving of the dies for this stamp, and instead of "post paid" the engraver (a local watchmaker) scratched on the copper the words "Post Office." One thousand of these stamps were issued, and only twenty-two copies have been traced. One of the latter was put up for auction in 1904, and realized £1,450. That particular stamp is now contained in King George's collection.

If it were again put up, it is certain it would command a very much higher figure.

The King's collection is reported to be one of the finest and most interesting in the world. His Majesty's interest in philately and his own album is demonstrated by the presence of a representative at all important stamp sales.

The most famous collection is that of the late Mr. T. P. Tapling, M.P., which he bequeathed to the British Museum, and which has reposed there for twenty-eight years. Its estimated value is approximately £1,000,000, one of the rarest specimens contained therein was removed from the showcase and placed in a locked room.

Curious Clubs.

The announcement in the Press recently that a "Bald-headed Man's Club" had just met—the first time since 1916, owing to the war—serves to recall one or two quaint clubs.

The "Fat Man's Club," for instance, was known to exist in Paris in 1897. Its heaviest member turned the scale at twenty-four stone, and the chief qualification for membership of this club was to weigh fifteen stone ten pounds.

About this time there also met in New York the "Society of the Pointed Beards"—one of the most exclusive clubs of America. No one was eligible unless he had a carefully-cultivated beard of natural and personal growth, in good standing, and terminating in one symmetrical point half an inch from the apex of the chin, of sufficient evidence to preclude controversy.

At two club dinners, held in 1898, everything as far as possible harmonized with the objects of the society, even the menu-cards giving evidence of the beard mania, and the celery was even served with its leaves trimmed to a point.

Notable Firsts.

The first baby born in England after the Insurance Act came into operation was Mary Lydia Georgina Frances Goding, of St. Luke's Mews, Cromwell Road, Notting Hill. She started this life at one minute past twelve on January 15th, 1913, and promptly received a silver cup from a leading daily newspaper. Her two names, Lydia Georgina, were given to the helpless infant as a compliment to Mr. Lloyd George.

The first concrete ship made her maiden voyage in February. Despite heavy weather, the Armistice behaved satisfactorily, steered remarkably well, and showed an entire absence of vibration.

London will have her first skyscraper when a famous emporium in Oxford Street is crowned by the projected clock tower 450 feet above the pavement.

Europe's first Chinese newspaper recently commenced publication in Paris, under the editorship of Mr. Y. C. Yen. Its price is one penny, and it was issued for the benefit of the Chinese Labour Corps.

The first Prince of the Royal Family to be attached to a Government Department for service is Prince Albert, who commenced duties at the Hotel Cecil early in March. He is engaged on special work in connection with the Air Ministry, in which he had his own attendants, and occupies a separate office.

The first child born to a member of the present House of Commons was the daughter of Captain Tudor Rees, M.P. The Crypt of the House of Commons.

Found in the Post.

With the closing down of the department of the Postal Censor, some remarkable stories of the manner in which Germans in this country tried to circumvent the authorities are revealed.

chemical tests and the X-rays often revealed secret writing and concealed articles. Elaborate schemes by the enemy for being first in the markets of the world were defeated by the Censor's discovery of the details in secret communications. The Censor made it impossible for the enemy to communicate with his overseas markets, and innumerable letters from enemy sources indicated how much the factor contributed to the pressure of the blockade.

A Crust for the Ex-Kaiser.

A favourite method employed by Germans abroad to communicate with those at home was to conceal food, such as rice, tea, coffee, and cocoa, in roofs of newspapers.

Spreading false news about Britain by concealing seditious pamphlets between the covers of school books was another favourite dodge.

In the library and museum of the department are some amusing and curious mementoes which were addressed to the ex-Kaiser—bare chicken bones and dry bread, a "scarab that is cursed," and an American cartoon, marked: "If party is not there, please forward to St. Helena."
