

ASSUMED THE PASTORATE.

Rev. James W. Pedley Takes Charge at First Congregational Church.

Favorably Impressed His Hearers With His Initial Sermons—Wants Enthusiasm and Hard Work in the Church.

Rev. James W. Pedley, lately of Vancouver, B. C., assumed the pastoral charge of the First Congregational Church yesterday, and at both morning and evening services preached to large congregations. Mr. Pedley created very favorable impressions. He is of a very striking appearance, possesses a pleasing and graceful manner in the pulpit, and discourses in a soft voice, which can be distinctly heard at every point in the edifice. His sermons yesterday were more in the nature of general talks, and given with the object of instilling into the minds of the members and adherents the idea that a vigorous work was to be carried on, and that he wanted the enthusiastic assistance of all.

In the morning he took for his text Exodus xxvii, 1: "For the stuff they had was sufficient for all the work to make it, and too much," relating to the building of a church in the wilderness by Moses and his followers. Mr. Pedley thought it must have been pleasing to be a minister in those days. It was not without its embarrassments, however. People were a little more than ready to put their hands up. But the embarrassment that came from too much was not nearly so great as that which came from a lack of anything. A man could manage a surplus when he did not know what to do with a deficit. Surpluses would carry governments, societies and churches through, while deficits would bother them. Hon. George Foster would not have half as hard a time preparing for the next election if he only had a few surplus. Deficits were the things of which governments were afraid. The text led the reader to the old-time spectacle of the church people filled with enthusiasm for a cause which they had at heart and it was enthusiasm which manifested itself in a very practical direction. The people were enthusiastic and they manifested it—that was another thing. Their enthusiasm took the form of large and liberal giving, which was, indeed, a fine test. Some men were enthusiastic in their talk only, but the enthusiasm which came from a man's mouth and had no effect on his purse was not very valuable. The true patriot was more than a man of fine sentiments. He loved to talk about his country and he loved his country, too, and when it came to times of trials he gave his money and life. The people who were in the text were going to build a church in the wilderness, and how they came with their free-will offerings! There was gold and silver, and ornaments, and they gave them with an overflow in the treasury, and they had to be restrained from bringing more. The speaker did not think there ever was a congregation in the world so free from selfishness as that one. He thought, also, that if matters were inquired into, it would be found that there were some in it who took no part whatever in its affairs, who did not contribute in the least to its funds. Some did not work with the method, and found fault, but fault-finders were all right—the world could not get along without them. Fault-finding was a legitimate business, but the only persons having a right to pursue it were those who were working with the method, and in this work in the ancient days there were doubtless the right and left handers—people who would not like their left hands to know what their right hands were doing. Some of this stamp were living in the present day. There was the woman who goes down town to a milliner's, spends a half-hour in picking out a hat, pays a big price for it, and then goes to church half a day later so that it could be seen. And then she is struck with modesty in religious giving. There were people in the world who had too much enthusiasm, but it was a very scarce article as a rule. "I have said it to be necessary," said Mr. Pedley, in concluding, "to speak to you on this subject this morning. To those who belong to the church and intend to make it their church home and place of work, I would say with an enthusiastic spirit that I wish you to go into the enterprise. Lay aside all prejudices and biased opinions you may have had, and let us in the name of the Master and for his sake consecrate ourselves to do in this church what where other churches are doing theirs, and doing it nobly."

NO DEAL IN KINGSTON.

The Liberals Determined to Elect Their Candidate to the Ontario Legislature. Kingston, Nov. 4.—In regard to reports that an adjustment was made here when Hon. Wm. Hart was suffered to secure his seat in the Ontario House by acclamation, and that it was then agreed that Hon. Mackenzie Bowell would be unopposed by the Reformers if he offered here for the Dominion House at the next general elections. The Whig says: There is not an atom of truth in the statement of a bargain and seats. Mr. Hart was unopposed for lack of a candidate for the seat of Kingston. No proposal for a trade in support was received by the Reform organizations, and any offer of these bodies who would treat with or advance a proposition to barter the Dominion seat for Kingston would be very promptly asked to resign. Mr. Britton was nominated in the sincerest manner and in the confident hope of carrying things to victory. The Liberals of Kingston are not going to sell out Mr. Laurier at this critical stage of politics. Sir Mackenzie Bowell must count on a vigorous fight if he comes.

A Key Found.

My neighbor B. has found a key—a key to health it is, says he. If he is troubled with lassitude, constipation, biliousness, sick or nervous headache, cold feet, chilly sensations, fullness at the stomach, or any other of a long array of complaints, he takes Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They are so small, so easy to take, so prompt and thorough in their operation, and cost so little that they are sure to grow in favor with all who use them. In glass vials, 25 cents.

Hungary has seven orders, the leading one being that of the Dragon, founded in 1439.

In his VEGETABLE PILLS Dr. Parke has given to the world the fruits of long scientific research in the whole realm of medical science, combined with new and valuable discoveries never before known to man. For Delicate and Debilitated Constitutions Parke's Pills act like a charm. Taken in moderate doses the effect is both a tonic and a stimulant, mildly exciting the secretions of the body, giving tone and vigor.

WORTH $305,000,000.

Who the Richest Women in the World Are—How They Got It and How They Enjoy Life.

There are six rich women who deserve to be placed up near the top of the list of the world's great millionaires. Here they are and the total of their fortunes:

Senora Isidora Cousino	$200,000,000
Hetty Green	50,000,000
Baroness Burdett-Coutts	20,000,000
Mme. Barrois	15,000,000
Mary Garrett	10,000,000
Mrs. Woleska	10,000,000

Total $305,000,000

Isidora Cousino, of Santiago, Chili, heads the list of enormously wealthy women. She is possibly near half a century old, and is still remarkably beautiful.

Her maiden name was Goyenechea. For generations not only her family, but that of her husband, had owned vast tracts of land.

When her father died, Senora Cousino then, as her father's only child, inherited all of his wealth. Her husband died a short time afterward, and with two great estates to manage Senora Cousino became a business woman. She did wonderfully well with her property, and maintains three establishments at Santiago, and would to any one she might fancy.

When the American fleet was at Valparaiso, some years ago, she invited Admiral Uphur and his officers to visit her. They had a royal time, and the whole city of Santiago was at their disposal. They could pay for nothing in shops and restaurants, and the theaters were thrown open to them. Carriages and horses, too, were likewise free; the senora paid the bills. Her houses are finer than any palaces anywhere, and she is really a queen, without assuming to be one. Her lands alone pay her $50,000 a month.

Miss Mary Garrett is about 40 years old, and possesses a fortune which is so large that she is unable to figure how large it is. It topped $200,000,000 when she died. She lives in a magnificent house on Monument street, Baltimore. An army of servants preside over the establishment, and a French chef gets $5,000 a year for looking out for them. They had a royal time, and the whole city of Santiago was at their disposal. They could pay for nothing in shops and restaurants, and the theaters were thrown open to them. Carriages and horses, too, were likewise free; the senora paid the bills. Her houses are finer than any palaces anywhere, and she is really a queen, without assuming to be one. Her lands alone pay her $50,000 a month.

Miss Garrett is a student and a business woman as well, a Greek and Latin scholar, and a skillful hand at embroidery.

Her latest charitable work is the founding of the Bryn Mawr school, where poor girls are prepared for college, and many a struggling musical genius has found his or her start to this little, frail, rich woman.

She speaks four languages, and knows every detail of the great Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, which her father founded. She knows, too, what the other railroads are doing, and is a keen judge of the value of securities. Her voice is soft and low, and she is not a bit masculine, although she is masculine in her business interests.

Few English women are better known than the Baroness Burdett-Coutts. She is unquestionably the richest of her sex in that country. She resides in London, and seldom goes out of town. Her home—Holly Lodge—is just outside the city, situated on the summit of a hill.

Mrs. Hetty Green is still almost as spry as a young girl. In fact, her vitality counts in a measure for her success in handling her vast property. Quaker stock, she was born in Rhode Island. Her $50,000,000, more or less, was largely inherited, though by her own shrewd methods she added much to it. For 30 years Mrs. Green has attired herself in a plainly-made black dress and a faded bonnet to match. Thus armed, she could go to a stock company, draw $1,000,000 in $10,000 bills, and carry it off in an old-fashioned trunk without the slightest fear of being robbed.

The beauty of this sextet of rich women is Mme. Barrois that was, now Marquise de Roda, wife of a Spanish grandee. When she was but 14 years old, at a ball, she visited the Emperor, and he was a great big fellow, with fierce cavalry mustaches, and the moment he set eyes on the young girl he vowed he should marry him, and she did, but not until he had put her mother superior in prison for refusing to allow the ceremony.

One day he was riding on horseback past a suburb of the city, when a man in a black dress assailed him.

His widow was then 39 years of age and the mother of seven children, all of whom are now living. Her father, Mr. Aparicio, is a coffee broker in New Spain. He helped settle the estate, and did so well that when Mrs. Barrois went to reside in New York she had considerably over a million apiece for each child, and "something over for herself and family," she said.

A type of dark beauty, young and wealthy, she had many admirers, but none won her favor until De Roda arrived. He is a marquis and rich. Now she is living in Spain, and the children are at different schools. One boy is to go to West Point.

Mme. Woleska, a widow, whose wealth is mostly in lands and towns, is of Russian birth, and lives in that country. Her vast wealth was inherited, and has greatly increased in value. She is a thorough business woman and spends two or three hours every day in going over her accounts with her head steward.

She is up-to-date, too, and has seen much of the world. In her investments in farming utensils and machines she has introduced to such an extent that she gets a higher rate for leases than her less progressive neighbors. Her daughters are well married, one to a nobleman, and one son is in the army. Her life is quiet and uneventful, and the care of the management of her estate is the most exciting thing she experiences.

Nothing Hunts Out Corns

Like tight boots. Corns are very small affairs, but apply to them a pair of tight boots and all other concerns of life sink into insignificance. Tight boots and Putnam's Corn Extractor (the great and only cure for corns) may go together, and comfort will be their partner, but don't fail to use Putnam's Corn Extractor. It is cheap, pleasant, and dangerous substitutes are in the market. Beware of them. Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. Polson & Co., proprietors, Kingston.

"GUILTY AND CAPABLE."

Verdict of the Jury in the Shortis-Murder Trial.

Beaumont, Que., Nov. 4.—Proceedings in the Shortis trial on Saturday consisted of Mr. MacMaster's address on behalf of the crown, and Judge Mathieu's charge to the jury in French and English.

Yesterday morning it seemed as if the whole male portion of the population of this village had turned out en masse and gone to the court house to hear the verdict in the Shortis case. All the counsels were present. The judge ascended the bench at 9:10 a.m. After the roll call the jury were asked if they had found a verdict.

A death-like stillness prevailed, and the clerk read his decision in both languages. "Guilty and capable" were the fatal words that came from the dozen throats in the jury box.

Judge Mathieu then put the three questions he had left for them to decide upon: "Did the prisoner murder John Loy on March 1st last?" Answer—"Yes."

"At the time of the murder was the prisoner in a state of mind which rendered him incapable of judging the nature and quality of his acts, or of knowing that such act or murder was wrong?" Answer—"No."

"Is the accused guilty or not guilty?" Answer—"Guilty."

During these proceedings the prisoner stood erect and stolid. Not a muscle moved in their possession arms or in their faces. Judge Mathieu announced that sentence will be passed today at 10 a.m.

The counsel for the defense say they intend to appeal.

THE JUDGE EXPLAINS.

Rights of Officers to Search Their Prisoners.

Windsor, Nov. 4.—The decision of Judge Falconbridge that the police have no right to search prisoners unless they are of the opinion that they have in their possession arms or instruments to do bodily harm has caused considerable adverse criticism in the Dominion. In speaking of the matter on Saturday Judge Falconbridge said:

"That portion of my charge to the jury in the recently tried case of Gordon vs. Stephen, which dealt with the right of an officer to search a prisoner, has been much quoted, and is possibly capable of being taken to an extreme which would be inimical to the efficiency of the police and to the interests of justice. My remarks applied to the circumstances of the particular case, and were only illustrating the principle that there is no law rendering a person, whose presence is required as a witness, and who has been arrested on that ground alone, liable to the regulations of a police officer as a criminal."

SHOP GIRL NOW PEERLESS.

Lady Dudley Was Once a Saleswoman for a London Modiste.

Lady Dudley is probably the only peeress of England who has risen from the rank of a shop girl to her present social eminence.

True, she bore prior to her marriage the name of Gurney, one of the most ancient in Norfolk. The young countess' father, however, met with business reverses, resigned his partnership in the Gurney Bank, and surrendered all his possessions for the benefit of his creditors.

Mrs. Gurney opened a millinery shop in London, but met with scant success. Her two daughters, who acted as assistants, ultimately becoming saleswomen in the shop of a modiste.

About a year previous to Lord Dudley's marriage, the now widowed Duchess of Bedford and her sister, Lady Henry Somerset, interested themselves on behalf of the two young girls, and removed them to more congenial surroundings.

Rachel, the eldest, became a member of the household of the Duchess, while the younger, Lady Trowbridge, was adopted by Lady Henry Somerset. It was as the adopted daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Bedford that Rachel Gurney married young Lord Dudley.

DIED FROM A SCRATCH.

Lapeere, Ind., Nov. 3.—Mrs. Sarah Dunn, living near New Buffalo, Mich., died yesterday as the result of a dog scratching her on the arm. Blood poisoning developed, and she died after suffering the most intense agony. Physicians were puzzled by her case, death resulting two days after she was stricken.

HORSE IN A JEWELRY STORE.

Flint, Mich., Nov. 3.—A runaway horse dashed down the sidewalk of Main street for several blocks yesterday afternoon, raising havoc along Saginaw street. It finally dashed into the jewelry store of George E. Childs, breaking the elegant plate glass and demolishing about $200 worth of jewelry. The horse destroyed $300 worth of property in its mad race.

Give Holloway's Corn Cure a trial. It removes corns from one pair of feet without any pain. What it has done once it will do again.
