NEW YORK April 14.—Wall street,
new and sentiment still favors higher prices.
There has been a good deal of fresh bying, and it looks as if there would be a further advance before the close today. The situation has been helped, in the opinion of very competent observers, by the decline in wheat prices and by the more favorable condition in foreign exchange market. It is still uncertain whether we shall export any more gold this week or not. There has been good buying going on from banking sources, and it looks as if some of the banking interests were favorable for a further rally.
