ERROR IN NINTH

Singles by Baker and Nason Produce Sole Tally in Ninth.

ONLY SIX HITS

Special to The Advertiser. Hamilton, Sept. 4 .- "Lefty" Achen bach has had a tough time all season trying to blow 'em past the Clipper swatsmiths, and the same thing held true today, although his offerings were treated with more than usual politeness by the Wetzel clan. "Lefty" hooked up in a hurling duel with Karl Adams for part of the game, but in three frames in a hurling duel with Karl Adams for part of the game, but in three frames the former wandered from the straight and narrow path and in these innings, the second, fourth and eighth, the locals made merry with his slants, getting their total runs in bunches. The final count was 9 to 1, but it was little indication of the play.

The Tecs fought hard to knock Adams for the well-known row of Mah Jong chips, but the lanky southerner was on his best behavior and let the Beattymen down with six scattered blows. Their one lone tally was slipped across when the Clippers weren't looking in the ninth. In the other frames Adams was seldom in trouble, and when he worked himself into a hole, he promptly unloaded his choicest shoots to emerge scathless.

A bad throw started the scoring for the locals. In the second Neitzke shot a hot drive teward third, and Sandquist's peg pulled the Tec manager off first. Schwab and Windle were easy outs, Neitzke moving to third in the meantime. He taillied when Robertson uncorked a smash to center that was good for two sacks. Karn Adams then helped the cause by boosting one of Achenbach's slants over the center field wall. Neitzke's homer in the fourth added another run, and the locals were helpless then until the eighth, when they tucked the game away nicely.

Two walks, two doubles, and two singles caused the damage, McGee and Schwab getting the free trips, and Gleich, Neitzke, Windle and Adams accounting for the base knocks.

Forest City Takes Major Honors at C. N. E. Dog Show.

Special to The Advertiser.

Toronto, Sept. 4.—Of all the cities represented at the big international dog show at the Canadian National Exhibition, London, Ontario, has carried away the biggest honors, and this in competition with practically every city on the American continent. In three of the most popular breeds, and one other well represented breed, the best in show award went to London dogs.

Prince of Wales, owned by C. S. Webber of London, created a stir that will long be remembered by every bull-dog breeder who attended the show, when he went from novice class right through to winners and best bulldog, defeating one of the best fields ever assembled in a bulldog ring in Canada. Prince of Wales, little more than a youngster, is declared by bulldog men from far and wide as the greatest bull-dog in years. He is certainly all that fills the eye in head, bone, body and general conformation, a real bulldog, teeming with quality.

In Russian wolfnounds again the best of breed went to London, when E. M. Burke's Ch. Galaroff o'Valley Farm defeated a fast field. This is nothing new for this splendid hound, who is yet to meet defeat in either the American or Canadian ring.

Lunan-Perry Entry Wins.

Boston terriers, one of the largest entries in the show, were headed by that great campaigner, Ch. Globe League o' Nations, owned by Messrs. Lunan and Perry of London. This is the second year that this good dog has won the high honor at the Canadian National, and his victory was a popular one, for never was the Globe champion put down in finer fettle. Despite the fact that the quality in male Bostons surpassed any other show held here for years, the little London dog seemed to win with ease in the specials. Two champions from the United States had to fall to minor places in the classes, so keen was the competition in this breed.

J. C. Fitzgerald of London copped off the best of breed award with his toy This youngster's display of tennis ast week, when he won the junior hampionship of the city in straight lets, indicated the way in which the game is developing in London. The Other winners from London included W. H. Shortt's good wirehaired foxterrier Whiskaway who won first in a good Canadian-bred class, and was second in the limit and third in the opengood wins these, for the competition was keen in this breed. Harry Whitsit won two thirds on a good puppy that needs a bit more time to take his place among the terriers. M. J. Rorke's Boston terrier female Katy Did won first in her class, while J. C. Fitzgerald's pekingese female was second in the limit, and runner-up to the reserve winners female. W. E. Cooper, with Piccadilly Victorious, was third in a large class of bulldogs.

All of the dogs mentioned in the above Toronto report have been entered for the London show in connection with the Western Fair, it is reported from the fair headquarters, so Londoners interested in dogs will have an opportunity to view these famous aristocrats next week. Whiskaway Victor.
