

Claims Rich Estate; Transplants Beating Heart; Harvest of Fish

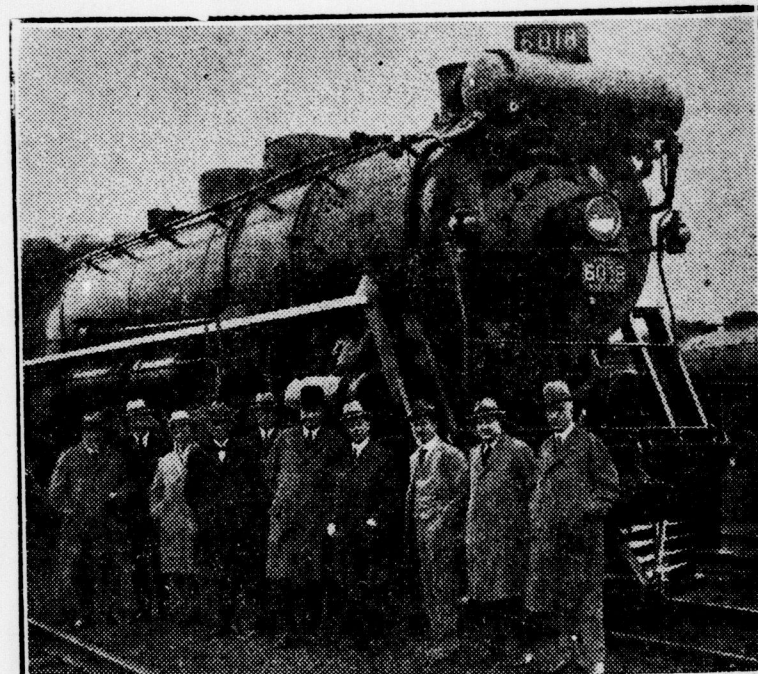

The first tackle of the season at Syracuse University shows Jim Foley, half-back, hit low by Vic Hanson in the pre-season practise on the college field

The extent to which the head is used in English soccer can be seen in this photograph taken during a game between the Tottenham Hotspurs and the Everton Football Club

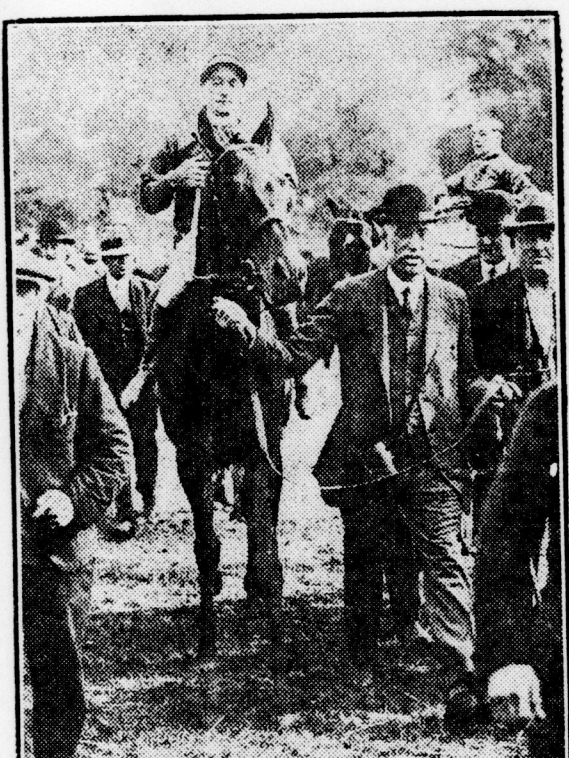

Here is a typical scene along the Yarmouth quayside during the herring season in England. Thousands of pounds of fish are unloaded from the trawlers every day and sent to the packing houses

Sir Henry W. Thornton, K.B.E., chairman and president of the Canadian National Railways, with other officials of the roads, made an inspection of the train which carried the Prince of Wales to his western ranch

Nita Naldi, screen vampire, now in Europe, is to marry Giacomet Sanges, president of the Cleveland Trust Company and famous duelist. Sanges came from Italy as a boy with Nita's father, and has long been a suitor

The St. Ledger winner, Salmon Trout, is shown being led in by R. C. Dawson, its trainer, after winning the famous English race. The second horse, Santorb, is seen on the right

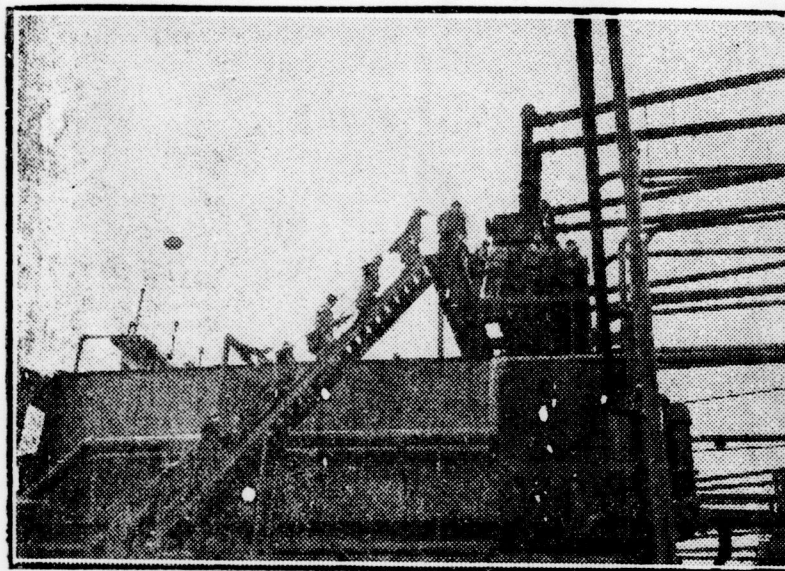

The sudden death of Eva May, screen star of Germany and daughter of the famous film star, Mia May, created a sensation recently in Vienna. Miss May, known as the "Mary Pickford" of Germany, was but 23 years of age

A dog show for the theatrical profession was held in London recently. Miss Elissa Landi, a member of the cast of "Storm", poses with her all-black Newfoundland outside her theatre

In the dance of nations, as portrayed by Viennese artists, Margarete Erville showed real talent and charm in this exotic Rumanian dance

During the Canadian tour of the British scientists some of them stopped off to view the Imperial Oil Refinery at Calgary, Alberta, the centre of recent oil discoveries

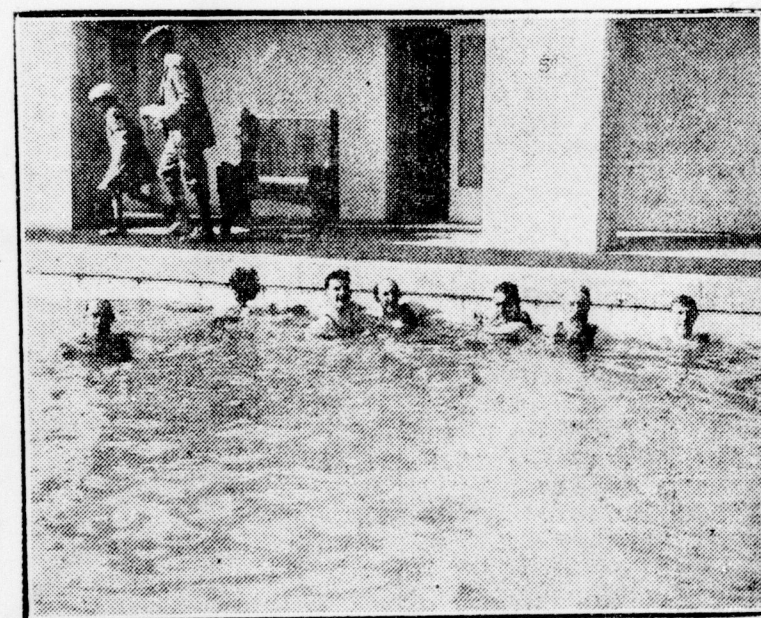

Dr. Philip Wurzburg of Germany has made scientific history in his transplanting of beating hearts in embryo salamanders. Though this is a far cry from human transplantation, it is regarded by scientists as the first step

Lord and Lady Haig and their two eldest daughters, (left) Lady Alexandra and (right) Lady Victoria, are pictured beside the old well on their beautiful country seat presented to the family on the conclusion of the World War

Mrs. Isabella Callaghan, 80 year-old resident of Astoria, Long Island, claims to be the direct descendant of Lady Janet Ogilvie, sister of the Earl of Airlie of 1735. Courts are now probing her claim to the wealthy estate

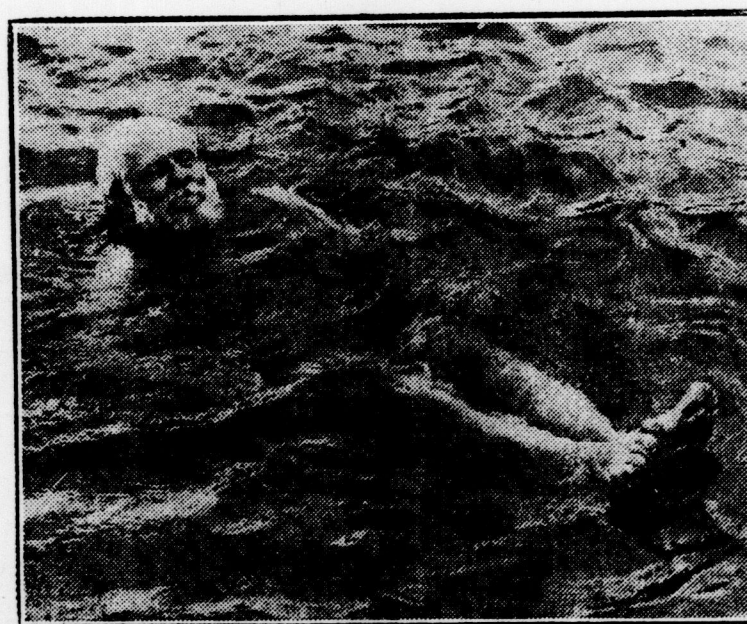

Professor D'Arcy Thompson (with beard) with other British scientists, were photographed enjoying a swim in the pool at the C.P.R. Banff Springs Hotel, Banff, Alberta

The Prince of Wales is here seen in front, as a little boy, with the late King Edward VII. and Queen Alexandra, grandfather and grandmother, and the late Queen Victoria, great grandmother

This remarkable "shot" of a mountain eagle was made on a Mexican plain, as the king of birds swept down in search of prey that would come within his weight requirements

William E. Lediard, England's eighty-one-year-old swimming enthusiast, who, despite his years, continues his daily plunge long into the cold weather when others, younger than himself, have already called the season ended

The two brawny youths are sixteen-year-old members of the Georgia Technical High School football squad and the little fellow, same age, is a mental giant if not a physical one. He has already completed one year in university