Financial Review

New York, Jan. 18.—Reactionary tendencies continued in this week's sessions of the stock market, although special strength developed in several issues subject to individual influences. Band prices strengthened in response to a continuation of Buropean buying and fow money rates. The sharp setback in stock prices on Monday was general-ally attributed to the conviction of a weakened technical position resulting from two months of almost steadily rising prices. Partial recovery was made in the next few sessions, but the general list turned heavy again toward the close of the week. the close of the week.

Operators on the long side of the market were inclined to reduce their commitments pending a more definite indication of the trend of business this spring. This profit-taking encouraged a resumption of short selling, which was perficularly effective in stocks of all a resumption of short selling, which was particularly effective in stocks of oil companies owning Mexican procerties. ITade news was rather mixed. Increased activity and higher pig iron prices were reported by the steel industry, which, with the payment of the last back dividends on Republic Steel preferred, brought fresh buying into the steel group. Oil shares were helped by the further upward rivisio nof crude oil and gasoline prices. The small increase in crude production reported by the American Petroleum Institute was more than counteracted by the sharp drop in imports, due to the suspension of operations in some of the oil fields controlled by the Mexican rebels. Freight car loadings for the first week in January showed another decrease under the corresponding period last year. Nevertheless, good buying continued in the railroad group, especially among some of the low-priced issues. Southern Railway crossed 43 to a new high record for all time. Lehigh Valley and Reading issues also were a new high record for all time. Lehigh Valley and Reading issues also were
