certain unsound doctrines, which, however, he afterwards retracted—"I will have for my new Bishop," said the good King, some man who has nothing to retract."

But a third course may, I have said, be taken to remove from Dr. Hampden the ban of exclusion of which your lordship writes. Let the censure of the University which has created it be proved to be unfounded—let this be done before any competent tribunal, and Dr. Hampden will then enter on the office it be proved to be unfounded—let this be done before any competent tribunal, and Dr. Hampden will then enter on the office to which your lordship has designated him with powers of usefulness which he will otherwise, if he ever enter upon it at all, be utterly unable to carry with him. My lord, a higher authority than any congé d'elire or letter missive has said, "a Bishop must be blameless;" not exempt, I need not say, from human infirmity, not free from every breath of calumny and envy, but pure from all which can be justly called "blame,"—pure from the censure of all who are entitled to pronounce judicially upon him.

Your lordship is pleased to add, what I must confess no lighter testimony than that of your own hand could make me think it possible that you could write, that "this would be, in fact, to say, that the supremacy which is now by law vested in the Crown is to be transferred to a majority of the members of one of our Universities."

My lord, if, instead of a decree having been passed against Dr. Hampden for unsound teaching by the University of Oxford, a judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench had been pronounced against him of the Court of Queen's Bench had been pronounced aga against him for some flagitious crime, and if this judgment were urged as a reason why he should not be promoted to a bishopric, would this be to transfer the royal supremacy from the Queen to Lord Denman? If it would not, why should it be said to follow the said to sa follow from Dr. Hampden's being disqualified for a bishopric, so long as he is under the censure of the Oxford decree, that this is to transfer the supremacy of the Crown to the Convocation

My lord, I own I am morrified at finding myself obliged to My lord, I own I am mortified at finding mysen one answer such transparent sophistry as this.

interests, however mistaken I may deem your way of testifying

Your unwillingness to "sacrifice the reputation of Dr. Hampden' does you honour. Shall I be deemed officious if I suggest to you the only expedient by which you can preserve it? For Dr. Hampden's sake—for your own sake—for the sake of his pentation. reputation and of your own—let his theological writings be subjected to a fitting and adequate tribunal. If the result be a sentence of exculpation, then, indeed, Dr. Hampden's reputa-tion will be upheld and vindicated; then, indeed, it will "not be sacrificed," which else it must be if he be forced, or if it be attempted to force him. attempted to force him, on the reluctant and reclamant Church, by rousing into life and activity the hitherto dormant powers of the most hateful and most tyrannical law which is permitted to pollute our statute book.

But your lordship is further resolved " not to sacrifice" what you call "the rights of the Crown," founded upon the statute.

My lord, the name of Russell ought to be—ever will be, I My lord, the name of Russell ought to be—ever will be, I am sure, in your reflecting hours—a security to us against the application by you of a phrase so sacred as "the rights of the Crown" to a matter so foul as the provisions of the statute of which I am writing. My lord, the Crown has no right, can have no right, (I trust, too, that it will be found to have no power), to force a Bishop on the Church whom the Church has just right to reject as a "setter forth of erroueous and strange doctrine, contrary to God's word." True, my lord, the statute 25 Henry VIII., chap. 20, (the Magna Charta of tyranny), does give to the Crown a power, which your lordship has been does give to the Crown a power, which your lordship has been pleased to call a "right," to condemn to prison and to penury any dean or any chapter which may refuse compliance with such a mandate. But no statute has the power to effect the cution of the mandate itself; no statute has the power to make an honest and conscientious chapter to elect, or an honest and conscientious prelate to consecrate to the office of Bishop, such a person as I have described above. Forhear, my lord, while you have yet time. Persist not in Your rash experiment. The bands of your vaunted statute will snap asunder, like withs, if you attempt to bind with them the strongest of all strong men-the man who is strengthened with inner might against the assailant of his Church.

My lord, do not imagine that I am one of those who, if it were within their power, would deprive the Crown of any portion of its rightful. tion of its rightful supremacy, especially of its just, legitimate, Christian influence in the appointment of our bishops—an influence which I firmly believe to be necessary to the peace, and therefore to the efficiency of the Church. Let the Crown continue to nominate them, but let it exercise this right, which almost all considerate Churchmen wish it to retain, with caualmost all considerate Churchmen wish it to retain, with caution, with discretion, with due regard to the feelings and the conscience of all concerned. Depend upon it, my lord, the is a very delicate, as well as a very important, particular of the al supremsey.

But I will not enlarge on this matter. Again I implore you to forbear, while you yet have time. Retrace your steps; and be assured every honest and good man, every prudent and sound adviser above the step of t adviser, above all, your own conscience, though not, it may be, your present transient feeling, will applaud your forbearance,

I have the honour to be, my lord, Your lordship's most obedient servant, H. EXETER.

My Lord—I have just seen a copy of your lordship's an-awer to the address from the lay members of the Church (very many and very distinguished members, as I have heard), on occasion give your lordship full credit for the motive to which you ascribe this appointment; but I must frankly say that I should esteem any act a poor and worse than worthless compliment to "the Protestant character" of our Church, aye, and a real weakening of the Protestant character, placeater, rightly understood. weakening of that Protestant character, rightly understood, which tends to make that character less Catholic, and less worth worthy of the confidence of the sound portion of the Catholic Church throughout the world.

But I have pleasure in stating to your lordship, that not only in my own diocese, but in many others, the resolutions, addresses, and petitions, on this occasion, have been subscribed by the clergy of all shades of religious opinion, among them those who are most strenuous in the cause of Protestantism.

I also feel it my duty to state to your lordship, that I have been assured that there was great reason to fear that if this appointment had taken place without strong resistance from all who could resist, and without remonstrance from those who could only remonstrate, there would have been a fresh and hote deplorable, as well as far more numerous "defection from our church, which would then have seemed tacitly to sequich, which would then have seemed tacitly to acqu esce in its own degradation, and so to have almost unchurched itself

Without presuming to question the right of your lordship, as an individual, to condem any public act of any body of men whatsoever, I yet may take the liberty of saying that I cannot tecognise the fitness (I am unwilling to use a stronger word) of the First Minister of the Crown thus publicly and officially holding up to indignation a solemn desiree of one of the most holding up to indignation a solemn descree of one of the most eminent and venerated bodies, not only in England, but in

we have seen and heard enough of the strong feeling both of men and of clergy on this occasion to convince us that the pointment, if persisted in, will stir up feelings of bitterness, itch it would be impossible soon to eradicate, and which und probable to the convenience of the co ald probably lead to consequences which your lordship would ate as earnestly as ourselves.

the part of those who would indulge such feelings.

The consequences with which I am threatened I am prepared to encounter, as I believe the appointment will tend to strengthen the Protestant character of our Church, so seriously threatened of late by many defections to the Church of Rome. Among the chief of these defections are to be found the leading promoters of the movement against Dr. Hampden, eleven years ago, in the University of Oxford.

I had hoped the conduct of Dr. Hampden, as Regius Professor of Divinity, and Head of a Theological Board at Oxford, had effaced the memory of that unworthy proceeding. I have the honour to be, my lords and gentlemen, Your obedient servant, J. RUSSELL.

THE ASSEMBLING OF THE FIRST ROMAN PARLIAMENT.

(From the London Daily News.) ROME, Nov. 15 .- There are men living (for instance, that octogenarian correspondent of the Gentleman's Magazine, Jas. Roche, J. P., of Cork) who saw Benjamin Franklin in Paris, and witnessed the first meeting of the National Assembly of France. But neither the formation of an American Congress, nor the establishment of a constitutional representation in the old despotism of Gaul, presented such a graceful and withal solemn scene, as was to day witnessed in the capital of the Christian world. This morning the sun shone out most gloriously to usher in the noble spectacle. The whole population flocked to the Corso, and lined the route from the Quirinal hill to the Vatican, in which palace one of the most lofty and spacious halls has been set apart for the new deliberative assembly. Never were the palaces and houses that line the way bedecked so tastefully, and crowded with such groups of proud citizens so tastefully, and crowded with such groups of proud cutzens and beautiful matrons exulting in the regeneration of their native land. At 9 o'clock the march began from the court of the Quirinal Palace, where all the dignitaries had early mustered. The whole spectacle was felt by the Roman people to be one of inestimable import, and a solemn stillness, a deep felt consciousness of its significancy pervaded the 100,000 spectators of the matrix of the court of the court of the Quirinal Palace, where all the dignitaries had early mustered. The whole spectacle was felt by the Roman people to be one of inestimable import, and a Lying-in Charity.

One amusing feature in the new aspect of affairs, is the effect it is beginning to have on the minds of that numerous class who always "go with the winning party."
