

silent. When I was in Moscow I put my views to M. Ryzhkov, president of the Central Committee of our trade union. And nothing has yet happened.

How can we teach our reindeer herdsman to work under the new economic conditions when opinions "from below" are disregarded? It turns out that concern about people and their working and living conditions has once more been put on the back burner. Is it realistic then, when this is the case, to count on including young people in our isolated teams? It will be necessary, apparently, to once more recruit reindeer herdsman in Ryazan...

Trud

5 February 1988

Page 2 (slightly abridged)