JUNIOR LEAVING, 1893.

/ "There is no place in the town which I so much love to frequent as the Royal Exchange. 2 It gives me a secret satisfaction, and, in some measure, gratifies my vanity, as I am an Englishman, to see so rich an assembly of countrymen and foreigners consulting together upon the private business of mankind, and making this metropolis a kind of emporium for the whole earth. 3 I must confess I look upon high-change to be a great council, in which all considerable nations have their representatives. 4 Factors in the trading world are what ambassadors are in the politic world; they negotiate affairs, conclude treaties, and maintain a good correspondence between those wealthy societies of men that are divided by seas and oceans, or live in the different extremes of a continent. 5 I have often been pleased to hear disputes adjusted between an inhabitant of Japan and an alderman of London, or to see a subject of the Great Mogul entering into a league with one of the Czars of Muskovy. 6 I am infinitely delighted in mixing with these several ministers of commerce, as they are distinguished by their different walks and languages; sometimes I am jostled by a body of Armenians; sometimes I am lost in a crowd of Jews; and sometimes make one in a group of Dutchmen. 7 I am a Dane,
