

scarcely any kind of fruit upon earth, that may not be produced in perfection in some part of Palestine, so excellent is the soil, and so diversified is the climate, being tropical in the vicinity of the Dead Sea, and arctic about the summit of Mount Lebanon, with all the intervening temperatures in the other portions of the country.

"The Holy City" is described by the prophet Ezekiel as about ten miles square, or about one hundred square miles in extent. The site of the present City of Jerusalem (about one mile square) being reserved as "the Sanctuary," or a kind of park, in the centre of the future "Holy City."—Ezekiel xl, 5—xlv, 2—xlviii, 15, 16, 17, 30-35.

One of the finest harbours in the world may also be easily constructed at Acre, near "Mount Carmel," where extraordinary facilities exist for that purpose, and railroads from thence, Eastward, and Northward, and Southward, as may be required; for all Palestine must be surveyed for the construction of roads, and for immediate settlement.

Any such prompt and earnest action on our part, would not only "rouse up" the Jewish people effectually so as to cause them to zealously exert themselves to improve their condition, intellectually, morally, physically, and socially; (until their coming prosperity and advancement will very soon be as remarkable as their affliction and degradation have already been during the past eighteen centuries,) but many thousands of the clergy, throughout Christendom generally, will also soon find themselves compelled to accept and communicate a much higher degree of spiritual "light" and knowledge, than they have hitherto accepted and communicated; or they will otherwise inevitably become subject to the poverty and contempt which will naturally fall to the lot of those who shall still persistently refuse to take advantage of the great spiritual "light," and knowledge, which must now prevail during the coming era of "the Kingdom of God" upon earth.

These two important forces, the Jewish people, and the educated clergy of Christendom, will providentially help much to advance "the Kingdom of God" upon earth; for the millions of poor Jews, who so greatly need a home and country of their own, will naturally supply much of the requisite earnestness and zeal; (the few wealthy Jews affording much of the requisite material help;) and the many thousands of educated clergy in Christendom,
