

DINNER TABLE HINTS

WHEN prudish spinsters are among the guests present the leg of a fowl should always be served with plenty of dressing.

Horseradish should always be served hot.

It is permissible for potatoes to come to the table in their smoking-jackets.

Persons desiring to provide a neat French dinner, will find mule steaks with a curry of horseradish and a pony of wine, served a la carte, a good stable menu.

Bald-headed guests deem it a compliment when the dinner bill is made to include an ample supply of hare.

Guest arriving late should be served with ketchup.

In planning a dinner the particular taste of each guest should be kept in mind. Policemen are fond of beats, while electricians prefer currents.

When an invited guest proverbially arrives so late that the dinner is cold, the hostess should make it hot for him.

Guests with pugilistic tendencies are likely to take kindly to pound cake with punch and claret on the side.

SEASON- ABLE ADVICE

Following are the correct articles of wear for gentle spring:

RAIN-COATS
GA-LOSHES
RUBBER
BOOTS
ARCTICS
EAR
MUFFS
SOU'-
WEST-
ERS
LEG-GINGS
OILSKINS
UMBREL-LAS CRAVEN-
ETTES
LAST WIN-TER'S
FURS
MITTENS
etc., etc.