8vo. 519 pages. Net. $3.00.

This work, the result of many years diligent investigation, comprises chapters on: I. Some Early Travelers and Analysts. II. The Pioneer Press, and its products—Book-making—Book-selling. III. Early Periodical Literature of the Ohio Valley. IV. Libraries—The Historical and Philosophical Society of Ohio. V. Backwood Colleges—Schools and Teachers. VI. The Voice of the Preacher and the Clash of Creeds. VII. Political Oratory and Orators—the Lecture. VIII. Planting of Literary Institutions at Vincennes, Indiana—Libraries, Schools and the Press. IX. Pioneer Poets and Story Writers. X. Dr. Daniel Drake, the Franklin of Cincinnati. XI. Timothy Flint, Missionary, Geographer, Editor, Novelist and Poet. XII. Judge James Hall, Soldier, Jurist, Author and Editor. XIII. George Dennison Prentice, Journalist, Poet and Wit. XI. Edward Deering Mansfield, Publicist and Author. XV. William Davis Gallagher, Poet, Editor and Government Official. XVI. Amelia B. Welby. XVII. Alice and Phoebe Cary.

The book is an authentic history of intellectual progress in the Ohio Valley from the first settlement down to about the year 1860. Thousands of suggestive facts are presented in a pleasing style; and almost every Western name of any significance in literature, journalism, or education, is mentioned. Dr. Venable has collected a wonderful amount of curious and valuable information from sources out of the reach of most readers, and has produced a work that will be necessary to every library, and indispensable to readers interested in the study of civilization and culture.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

A veritable feast. Such an amazing amount of information, and so attractively presented. Accurate, perspicuous, elegant. The months and months of labor it has cost, and how perfect the achievement. I know of no other man who could have accomplished the work in such a masterly manner. The multitudes of names it mentions will interest thousands of readers. The intelligent and copious index is a strikingly valuable feature of the book.

[From J. Fletcher Williams, Librarian of the Minnesota Historical Society.]

I don't know when I have had such entertainment from a book. I can not tell you how much I enjoyed it. I was personally acquainted with a considerable proportion of the persons named therein, and your reminiscences of them brought back a flood of memories of the days gone by that filled me with delight. I congratulate you on your success. Your volume will always be of value to the student of western history.

[From Col. R. T. Durrell, historical writer and founder of the "Filson Club," Louisville, Ky.]

I have read the book, and been delighted by it. It fills an important gap in our western history, and fills it most charmingly. I don't know when I read a book that gave me more real pleasure.
