

The Return Home

hanging in a cage on the balcony outside burst in shrill song ; but for the rest the room was quiet.

Then someone came between the curtains of one of the long windows and stood looking at him where he had flung his head back against the chair with closed eyes and an air of utter fatigue.