Col. Denison and James L Hughes Criticized for Expressing Their Opinions -Keir Hardie Will Speak in Massey Hall to Tell Labor's Side of Question.

Imperialism and all its features was the subject that the delegates to the the subject that the delegates to the District Trades and Labor Council delved into last night at the Labor Temple. Before the discussion was concluded everyone who had ever spoken on the "German war scare" and the dangar to England was scored in a severe manner by the members.

Col Denison and James L. Hughes were the chief objects of attention. What the delegates did not say about Col. Denison is not worth mentioning. He was criticized in very pointed language by James Stevenson first. Then another member took up the attack. Finally nearly every man in the hall murmured a word or two about the colonel and his opinion on war between Germany and Britain.

As for Mr. Hugnes, another man opined that he was better parading around Europe speaking on the subject than in Toronto.

water and fell into the bay. His body has not been recovered. Mait Ayroyd grappled for the body from about 11 o'clock until after midnight and will resume the squal broke.

It was time, said the delegate, for the working people of Troento to hear the side of the people of the country of its peril and now was the proper time to disten to the views of a man who had come from the old land.

The present war scare was being manufactured by the interested capitalists who cared not for the results so long as their firearms were bought. They were using a systematic method of instilling "jingoism" into the people of Great Britain and trying to provoke a war. Mints of money were being spent on naval armament. The work naman had to pay for it. They did not have to go to war. No; their property was protected by the young blood of the country, men who did not own any land as a rule.

Delegate Donovan, who served in the Boer War and witnessed another one, declared that he was averse to war. He had seen too many comrades fall to battle not to realize all its horror.

Make Peace by Force. Make Peace by Force.

It would certainly be much better for everyone to live in peace, but the pages of history showed that even in the early days force was the way used to make peace. Other countries were increasing the number of their snips; Britain would have to do likewise. The time had not arrived to discard the real for the ideal, and would not until the ideal became practical. Then when all nations abandoned their ships Britain could do the same.

Several members stated that a large several members stated that a large dairy company was buying milk at $1.40 per can on a six months' contract. They were retailing it at 10 cents per quart.

Immediately the rest of the meeting wanted to know how it was that they could not get their milk for that price.

During the summer months they had been paying the uniform price of $1.27 per can for wagon milk and about $1.25 for train milk. Lately they had seen in the papers that the farmers were going to hold out for $1.70 for wagon milk.

At this point R. W. Dockeray had a few very cutting remarks to make about the press and the reports published therein. Whenever they asked him about anything he always said he knew nothing about it. If the papers wanted to instil a fear of high-priced milk into the people, let them do it, was his advice. His opinion was that the press should not be informed of anything whatever and the public should be kept in ignorance. The papers were always making a splurge anyway.
