SYNOD HEARS HOME REPORTS

Recommends Minimum Salary for Teachers—Rejoices in Prohibition.

The synod of Toronto and Kingston met yesterday in St. James' Square Presbyterian Church. Reports from home missions and social service departments were received and debated. H. J. Prichard, who presented the reports, stated the prime need was for workers in the home fields and amongst the alien community in Canada. Recommendations were passed suggesting Dominion-wide prohibition, abolition of race-track gambling. The Rev. S. D. Byrnes pleaded for men, not boys, in the work of the missions and rejoiced in prohibition and the defeat of the Citizens' Liberty League. The board of license commissioners are to be asked to exercise greater vigilance in regard to orders issued by doctors. Dr. Lee proposed that the Ontario board be asked to fix a minimum salary of $1,000 a year for day school teachers.

The synod has been divided into six groups. The total allocation is $1,105,000, of which Toronto Presbyterian's share is $500,000. The committee recommended that the synod accept the allocation of $1,105,000 as its share, and that they co-operate with the group organizers in every way possible.

Young People Meet. In St. James' Square Presbyterian Church last night a mass meeting of young people of the Presbyterian congregations of the city was held under the auspices of the synod's young people's committee, and of the various Presbyterian Churches in the city. Nearly all had sent delegations of young men and women.

Rev. C. A. Myers, M. A., associated secretary, S. S. and Y. P. S. board, addressed the meeting on the young people's forward movement aims. He advised the gathering on the need of organization. Organization, he said, is but the harness which is put on to perform a task. That half a million organized Canadians could do more toward defeating the Germans than ten million unorganized Russian soldiers, and the result of the recent referendum showed what a well-organized body could accomplish. Later, Rev. R. J. Wilson, D. D., of St. Andrew's Kingston, spoke on "The Challenge of the Times to Young People." He said it should be remembered that the Christian Church today is still the church militant, not yet the church triumphant, and not, as some croakers would have it, the church decadent, but it is the church of Christ with its war clothes on.

HOMER WARREN SUNK IN GALE

A coal barge, the "Homer Warren," owned by the Mines Coal Company, Toronto, foundered with nine hands in the lake near Putneyville about 30 miles east of Rochester on Tuesday night. The last seen of the barge was off Rochester when it was observed she was having a severe battle with the gale. Early yesterday two bodies were washed ashore at Putneyville wearing life preservers bearing the name, "Homer Warren, Toronto." The shore was also strewn with wreckage.

The first the Mines company heard of the disaster was when they got in touch with Oswego when they learned the steamer had foundered and the crew of nine were drowned. The steamer was 650 tons burden and loaded with nut coal. It has been running for three years and been on the Toronto-Oswego route.

There are two interesting incidents in connection with the disaster. The engineer of the lost boat, William Kerr, of 709 Dupont street, left the boat at Oswego so as to reach his sick wife. He is the only member of the crew alive. Just two years ago yesterday the Mines company lost their barge Alma on Lake Ontario in a storm out only one life was lost. The crew, however, lost yesterday on the Homer Warren were almost to a man the same crew who were towing the Alma when she went down.

The names of the crew so far as the company could give out yesterday, were: Captain William Stocker, Penetang; George Stocker, a brother of the captain, mate; Stanley Foster, Toronto; Pat Howe, Penetang, cook; and three other deckhands. Later news from the wreck were washed out in the name of Alex. B. Talbert, was found on one of the bodies. No means of identification for any of the others has been found.

COMMISSIONERS INSPECT HARBOR

See Best Piece of Civic Work Done in Belligerent Countries.

Yesterday was the Toronto harbor commissioners' annual inspection day and the commission, led by Chairman Clarke, the city council, the City Hydro commission and other citizens visited the waterfront from Fisherman's Island to Sunnyside, and saw how much has been done to give Toronto the greatest harbor, industrial and aquatic recreational facilities of any city in the world.

The party journeyed on the government steamer Waukena from the harbor commission building at the foot of Bay street, to the Don, walked east to the turning basin, which is south of Pape avenue; met the Waukena in the ship channel leading to the basin; passed thru the British Forgings buildings, which are now being changed into the plant of the Baldwin tire works, boarded the steamer again at the dock, walked near the Cherry street bascule bridge, traversed the bay, passed thru the western channel, returned to the Dominion Shipbuilding Company's plant (the site of which was water two years ago), where two steel steamers are under way, steamed to the commission building, motored to the Sunnyside pavilion for lunch and speeches, went over the board walk to look at the Humber breakwater, and this came to the end of a perfect day.

What the inspectors saw was, from many points of view, the most remarkable piece of civic work that was done in any belligerent country. Over six hundred acres of Ashbridge's Bay became dry land, on which immense quantities of munitions were made, and several other manufacturers built and set going. Walls for immense dockage have been built along the channels and the turning basin will be able to accommodate steamers as big as the Mauretania. The made land in the Sunnyside region will provide vast boating and other recreational facilities, with a park, at a cost of three million dollars. From Bathurst to Cherry the waterfront will be extended into the bay. Altogether then Toronto will have a new commercial waterfront, with a transformed island, and the city will own every foot of it—a unique achievement in public ownership.

A Great Enterprise. After several years' creative work below water, the great enterprise is now showing enough for the average citizen to appreciate its magnitude and value to the community. Next summer the commission will place a yacht at the disposal of the citizens' business organizations, schools, churches, societies, etc., so that they can inspect their own property and be satisfied that the revenues derived from the leasing of factory sites and other enterprises will pay current expenses and gradually extinguish capital obligations.

During the war the Toronto Street Railway built a line from the bridge at the Don station to Commissioners street, which, paved with concrete, runs east and west, where, when the war broke out there was only the water and reeds of Ashbridge's Bay, and served the British Forgings and other factories. The service is being maintained, factory location prospects are increasing, and Mr. Cousins, the engineer and general manager, told the party during luncheon that three banks have applied for sites in the former bay. Mr. Cousins also said that the commission has applications from manufacturers in the United States for a million square feet of floor space, and that, all told, in the city there could not now be found 250,000 square feet, and much of it not quite modernly equipped.

Of the other speeches at the luncheon Chairman Clarke and Commissioner Home Smith were expository. Mayor Church was both expository and congratulatory, and Controller McBride appeared entirely in a praiseful guise.

Home Smith paid warm tribute to two controllers who have joined the "Dumbells"—Francis Spence and Jack Ward—without whose work the great enterprise could not have been. Controller Spence was devoted heart and soul to harbor development, and Controller Ward for years induced the city council to buy water lots at prices which, compared with present values, were ridiculously low, the he was freely criticized at the time as an unpracticable extraneous agent.

Altogether it was a splendid day of learning of the work well done, of appreciation of the workers, and confidence for the future.

COXWELL BUYERS UP IN ARMS

Housing Commission Increases Prices on Houses After Purchase.

The purchasers of houses on Coxwell avenue from the Toronto Housing commission are up in arms over an addition to the price of the house made since the purchase deal. The commission state the increase was made necessary by higher cost of labor and improvements.

One complainant says he bought his house for $2,400. Soon after the purchase he received a notification that $200 had been added for improvements at the rear of the house. When that was agreed to he received another letter stating that another $140 had been added on, making the cost of the house $2,740. A deputation waited on the commission and they are now trying to thrash the matter out to the satisfaction of the tenants.
