A decision handed out in the supreme court in New York on Tuesday has given considerable encouragement to those who have thorobred interests at stake. It was the fifth and the most important decision fit all the racing cases that have arisen under the Agnew-Hart law. All favored the betting brigade. It was in the cases of Orlando Jones and Sol Lichtenstein, and the question there came up broadly as to whether frequency in betting was spinonymous with occupation. In other words, the office of the district attorney in King's County contended that in the infaking of many wagers lay the definition of what constituted a book.

The court ruled against all the contentions. It held that the making of wagers, whether at even or at varying odds—and the fact that wagers were made at varythe fact that wagers were made at varying odds was relied upon to establish the theory that the bets were those of bookmakers—did not make the layer a bookmaker so long as there was no recording or registering of the wagers. The Jourt sustained the writ issued by Justice Thomas ordering the discharge of the prisoners seems to be an opinion that when the law has been fully tested, racing will survive the present embarrassing tangle. While the racing associations have not laid any definite plans for the coming season as yet, it is said that over-night purses will not exceed $500, and that the midded money in a majority of the stakes will be limited to $1000. With a general outting off the free list and admission domined exclusively to the grand stand confined exclusively to the grand stand enclosure, the track-owners think that the sport can live, if not be made a source

The many friends of Mr. A. R. Loudon, secretary of the Hamilton Jockey Club, will sympathize with him in the loss of his father. Mr. Wm. Loudon, who died vesterday in Hamilton at the age of 7

ferring to shoot from a distance. Moreover, their centre never played his position like Birmingham, the result being passes galore which went for nought.

The outstanding feature of the game was the brilliant work of the two goalkeepers—Tyner and Mercer—they stopping shot after shot that looked sure goals. Ronan was plainly in his element on the forward line, his stickhandling and all-round work marking him as a player of no mean calibre. Ridpath worked like a Trojan, but spoiled his good work by catching the official's eye too often. At that, he had it on Marsh Cochrane. Corbeau played one of the best games seen here this season, and it was not his fault the team did not win.

For the visitors, Pete Charlton was the best; Murphy was good, while Goldie Cochrane shone in spots. Dusome was well mated in Runions.
