ARCHITECT HAS WILD PLAN

Demonstrates the Safety of Structure One Hundred and Twenty-Five building, the plans call for features, each of which is much out of the ordinary. There are forty immense elevators, which, instead of running straight "up and down, travel on tracks on inclined planes. They are more like aerial railways than elevators, and altogether there are fifty miles of these aerial elevators in the structure. Some run only to the fifteenth floor, others to the twenty-fifth, and the rest to the very top, where they reach an elevation of more than a quarter of a mile.

In the professor's plans there are only fifty-five main storeys. The five lower storeys are very high, ranging from 50 to 150 feet each, to accommodate large auditoriums and halls. Surrounding these on all sides will be galieries, mezzanine floors and half storeys, which are the rest of the country thru which the surveys ran, the government were not in possesison of it. Later on the government might have a report on the subject, but at present there was nothing available.

Mr. Boyce of Algoma remarked that altho information in respect to the plans for the Port Arthur and Fort William terminals of the G.T.P. had been refused to the house, he had been informed upon reliable authority that the information contained in the plan had been hawked about after having been passed thru the back door of the railways and canals department.

At this there was an outburst of what appeared to be mock indignation on the part of several of the ministers.

Mr. Emmerson declared that when, in August last, the plans for the terminals and the character of the country thru which the surveys ran, the government were not in possession of it. Later on the government ment might have a report on the subject, but at present there was nothing available.

Mr. Boyce of Algoma remarked that altho information in respect to the plans for the Port Arthur and Fort William versus available.

large auditoriums and halls. Surrounding these on all sides will be galieries, mezzanine floors and half storeys, which will make up the grand total of 125 storeys.

The first storey, with its grand staircase, will rise to a height of 100 feet. This storey will be given to a great rotunda, corridors, elevator entrances and staircases leading to the big auditorium above. In the second storey will be located the immense auditorium, rising to the height of 150 feet. This has six balconies and a seating capacity of 25,000. Four other storeys above these contain large halls in the middle, surrounded by antercoms, reception rooms and offices. The auditoriums are planned to be used for public purposes, meetings of all kinds of civic sccieties. The storeys mentioned will reach an aggregate height of 700 feet.

Above the 700 foot level and extending to 1400 feet are thirty-five storeys, each. 20 feet high, for municipal and civic.

Mr. Emmerson declared that when, in August last, the plans for the terminals at Port Arthur and Fort William were brought to him by Mr. Schreiber, the deputy minister, he instructed the latter. This he believed had been done so that if anyone had had access to the plans it was in contravention of those instructions. He suggested that Mr. Boyce should make known the source of his information in order that an investigation might take place.

Want the Information.

Want the Information.

This request the prime minister and the minister of finance also joined with some appearance of warmth. Mr. Boyce, however, contented himself with repeating his statement for which, he said, he took the entire responsibility further than that he did not feel called upon to go.

M. Haggart asserted that when, in August last, the plans for the terminals at Port Arthur and Fort William were brought to him by Mr. Schreiber, the deputy minister, he instructed the latter. This he believed had been done so that it anyone had had access to the plans it was in contravention of those instructions. He suggested that Mr. Bo

Above the 700 foot level and extending to 1400 feet are thirty-five storeys, each 20 feet high, for municipal and civic offices. This section will be made into seventy storeys by mezzanine floors. From the 1400 foot line the building tapers to a pointed tower.

In this tower will be five storeys, of 10 feet each, to be occupied by the United States weather bureau. Rising 50 feet above the top will extend a large beacon or searchlight, which, when in operation, can be seen for a distance more than 100 miles.

The plans call for 1500 rooms and 7500 windows are to furnish light. It is safe to assume that the majority of these windows would be so far above the street that they would look like mere loop-holes. The floor space of this structure would be 3,400,000 square feet. It is estimated that if such a structure should be creeted and a person was to traverse all the corridors and stafrcases, he would travel a distance of 52 miles, and it would take him the whole of two days. The dimensions call for a building 700 feet square, and to creet it would necessitate the use of sixteen city blocks.

The amount of material which would be required to build this great structure.

to erect it would necessitate the use of sixteen city blocks.

The amount of material which would be required to build this great structure—stone, iron and other materials—it is estimated, would weigh fully 2,000,000 tons, to carry which would require 100,000 freight cars. These cars would stretch in an unbroken line for 800 miles, almost from New York to Chicago. If the cars were broken up into trains and run as close together as permitted, the trains would reach from Roston to San Francisco. The volume of material that would be used in the construction of the building would be 22,104,000 cubic feet. It would exert a pressure of forty tons to the square on the base, without the added amount for wind pressure. It is estimated that the foundation would have to extend a distance of 100 feet into the ground, a distance greater than thousands of office buildings rise above mother earth.

Tar Footed Turkeys.

But this did not suit the ministers, who were evidently bent upon rallying their followers in a common attack upon the opposition. The appeal was not lost upon Mr. Black of Hants, who interupted with a fling at the ex-minister of finance. "How many Englishmen are equal to one Doukhobor?" observed Mr. Foster with a laugh, having reference to that hon, members noted break in a recent discussion on the immigration question. "A whole nest" chimed in another member on the government side.

Mr. Osler suggested that considerable time mint have elapsed between the arrival of th plans in the railway department and the day on which the minister ordered them to be placed under seal, during which time the contents of them might have been made known without any violation of the minister's instructions.

Mr. Electron Mr. Soler suggested that considerable time mint have elapsed between the arrival of the plans in the railway department and the day on which the minister ordered them to be placed under seal, during which time the contents of them might have been made known without any violation of the ministers.

Tar Footed Turkeys.

The turkey market, as it walks into town, is one of the sights of a Grecian city. If the turkeys are brought from a great distance their, feet are dipped in tar before starting to make them tough enough for the journey.

The turkey market, as it walks into town, is one of the sights of them might have been made minister's instructions.

Mr. Emmerson renewed his suggestion to be furnished with the name of Mr. Boyce's informant remarking that it was not fair to have it insinuated that Mr. Schrieber had given information about these plans.

Mr. Foster endeavored to ascertain from the minister of finance the date on which the budget might be expected. He was unsuccessful, however, as Mr. Fielding would not commit himself further than to say that he would announce the date in a few days.

Mr. Foster was equally unsuccessful in his endeavor to elicit from the prime minister the government's opinion upon the policy of the pamphlet recently is sued in support of separate schools, Sir Wilfrid did admit that the pamphlets had been distributed by the secretary of state, but he was not prepared, he said, to argue with Mr. Foster the Heretofore the answer to this request had been made that this matter fell within the jurisdiction of the construction commission, over which, it was steady labor.

Mr. W. F. Maclean, on the motion to go into supply, arose and directed the attention of the government to the very important judgment delivered recently by the supreme court of Canada sup-porting the contention of the C. P. R. against the claim of the western municipalities that the lands of the C. P. R. were subject to municipal taxation. After quoting from the judgment, Mr. Maclean went on to point out that this dicision declared that all the legisla-tion of the legislative council of the north west territories was tenative or temporary and can be repealed at any

"The prime minister," continued Mr. Maclean, "expressed the view the other day that this exemption of the C. P. R. lands from taxation was most burdensome to the people of the west and he deplored it and stated that it was the law of the country and could net be remedied."

Mr. Maclean continued: "The prime minister knew of no remedy by which the shackles which had been put upon the people of the west could be removed. I do not agree with the prime minister that there is no cure for these evils. For every legal wrong there is a legal remedy."

"What is the remedy?" Sir Wilfrid Laurier inquired.

Maclean.

He went on to say that this session the C.P.R. is asking for franchises all over the country, and now would be the time to negotiate with the company for reforms, just as Sir Wilfrid Laurier for reforms, just as Sir Wilfrid Laurier had done in connection with the Crow's Nest Pass Railway, and as Sir John A. Macdonald had done in the matter of the C.P.R. monopoly of branch lines, Mr. Maclean suggested that in view of the bearing of this important judgment upon autonomy, it should be printed. The house then went into committee of supply and passed a number of items in Mr. Emmerson's estimates for the Intercolonial Railway.

FARMERS' TELEPHONES.

Elemvale Lance: Judging by the numeer of independent telephone lines being built and projected, it appears that the farmers have come to realize, and rightly so, that telephones are as useful to them from a commercial and social standpoint as for people living in cities and towns. in cities and towns. These independent lines are mostly built and owned by farmers living along the route of the line. Some contribute poles, others work or money, while those who wish a telephone in their home buy the instrument outright and attach it to the line. The convenience of a telephone cannot be overestimated, but some of the more important uses might be mentioned, such as calling a physician in case of accident or during a busy time or stormy weather. The same applies to a veterinary surgeon, selling of stock or grain, enquiry as to repairs for machinery etc., while the social side for the ladies is just as interesting as for the ladies is just as interesting as for the ladies in town. It is a well known fact that once used they are regarded as necessities, and instead of being discontinued in any section, efforts are being made to extend the lines. This is particularly true in North and South Ontario. East York and West Sincoe and we see no reason why Flos or Tiny farmers, otherwise progressive, should lag behind in this forward movement.

Orangemen Decide on an Active Cam paign - Committee to Ascertain What Churches Will Do.

A conference of the leading Orangeen of the city was held in the County Orange Hall yesterday to devise the best means of opposing the separate school clauses in the Northwest autonomy bill. There were present Dr. T. S. Sproule, grand master of the Supreme Grand Orange Lodge of British North America, and W. J. Parkill of Midland, past supreme grand master, as well as other prominent provincial The conference decided to make a vigorous protest against the objectionable clauses by holding public meetings in every constituency and supporting in every way possible those representa-tives in parliament who are striving to have the separate school clauses expunged from the bill.

It has come to the notice of the Orangemen that some of the churches are taking steps to place themselves on record against the measure, and the conference yesterday appointed a committee to find out what the Protestant denominations were doing in the matter and to assist them. The executive last night decided, in view of the death of Mr. Clarke, to postpone the public meeting which was arranged to be held on Monday night in

HEROIC DAYS RECALLED.

Sheep at English Panto mine Banquet.

London, March 3 .- The chivalrous and London, March 3.—The chivalrous and heroic days of the old feudal times were recalled last night at a theatrical Old English supper given at the Midland Hotel, Manchester.

It was attended by many of the pantomime artists appearing in Manchester. Liverpool, and adjacent towns, in addition to other guests, each of whom was attired in costume peculiar to periods prior to the eighteenth century. There were king's courtiers and was attired in costume peculiar to perlods prior to the eighteenth century.

There were king's courtiers and knights of romance, minstrels, friars. outlaws, free-booters, jesters, all the characters in war and peace, down to the bare-born cottage churl. There were about seventy present, and they formed a gay, good-humored company.

The guests were received at midnight by Mr. Harrison Brockbank (freebooter), and then a bellman summoned the guests to the feast, which was spread in the banqueting hall, down which stretched one long table. As they marched round this, a choir in cassock and cowl chanted, and when everybody was seated they sang grace, Wine was shunned, but from brimming mugs and horns the company quaffed the mightiest ale.

The choir chanted "The Roast Beef of Old England." when the baron of beef was brought in, and again burst into melody when the roasted whole sheep followed. Afterwards a smoking concert took place, the guests puffing smoke from long church warden pipes.
